IF CHILD IS CROSS WON'T EAT

Take Doctor's Advice
Results Will Surprise You

If your precious child won't eat without cooing, is nervous and underweight... do what doctors the world over advise: Give him a little Castoria and you will see a marked improvement the first day. Authorities have found intestinal absorption of poisons to be the cause of most child ailments. Even when the child's habits may seem regular, poisons seep through the system and do damage. The stomach lingers. Food does not digest properly. The nervous system is delicate and balance. Nothing can correct this insidious condition quite as easily and naturally as Castoria. It tastes so good children beg for it. And it swiftly purges the little system of poisons. It settles the stomach, improves digestion and restores nerve-poise. Then Nature does the rest as only Nature can. Appetite for food quickly returns. Health is restored to normal. And as a result the child gains weight fast and becomes sturdy and strong. Now take care of your child this safe, drugless way. Get a bottle of Castoria and try it. Results will delight you.

MURDERER OF WAITRESS

LEEDS

David Maikill Blake (29) was hanged at Armley Jail, Leeds, at 9 o'clock of a recent morning for the murder of Emily Yeomans, a Leeds cafe waitress, by strangling her with her own scarf in Middleton Woods, on the outskirts of Leeds, on the night of October 10.

When Blake's appeal against the death sentence was dismissed by the Court of Criminal Appeal, Lord Hewart, the Lord Chief-Justice, described the murder as a cruel and treacherous one. The trial at Leeds, before Mr. Justice Goddard, evoked extraordinary public interest because of the fact that the case rested so much on circumstantial evidence and highly scientific testimony relating to the nature of a strand of wool torn from Blake's clothing. Miss Yeomans, who was 23 years of age, was seen to meet a man shortly after 7.30 on the night of the murder, and to walk with him in the direction of the Middleton Woods, where her body was found next morning. That same day, at the register office at Leeds, Blake married a waitress at another cafe by whom he had had a child. This woman, in the witness-box, swore that a box of powder found in Blake's room and said to have belonged to Miss Yeomans, was her property, but this evidence was negated by analytical chemists.

PREVIOUS OFFENCES

One of Blake's married sisters, Mrs. Florence Bousfield, made a last desperate effort to obtain a reprieve and personally presented a petition with 10,000 signatures at the Home Office. The Home Secretary, however, intimated that he saw no justification for intervening in the course of the law.

A farewell visit by his wife and his two sisters, Mrs. Bousfield, Leeds, and Mrs. Hodgkinson of Castleford, was paid to Blake on the afternoon before the hanging. They stayed half-an-hour.

It may now be revealed that Blake was sentenced to three years' penal servitude at Leeds in March 1930 for a most brutal outrage upon a young domestic servant whom he had offered to escort home across some fields, as he said, for safety, when she had just missed her last bus from Castleford. The circumstances of the offence were so bad that Mr. Justice Charles, when passing sentence, said he would have undoubtedly made it one of five years but for Blake's comparative youth. He was then 25 years of age. Blake, however, had previously been sentenced to two years' penal servitude—dismissed—from the Army with ignominy, and expelled from India for an outrage upon a 70 years old native woman.

SERVICE AT PRISON ENTRANCE

A crowd of over 500 assembled outside the jail shortly before nine o'clock on the morning of Blake's death. Amongst them were several Salvation Army officers. Blake as a boy was at one time in the Salvation Army.

A Salvation Army officer in uniform distributed hymn sheets amongst the crowd and intimated that a little service of prayer would be held at nine o'clock.

The service opened with the singing of "Jesus, Lover of my soul," after which prayers were said. As the hour struck, most of the crowd bared their heads.

A sermon lasting about five minutes was delivered, and at the conclusion a man in the crowd shouted, "Thou shalt not kill." The service ended with the singing of the hymn, "Abide with me."

Among the crowd—almost hidden against a wall—were relatives of Blake. They included Mrs. Bousfield and Blake's brother-in-law, Mr. Pearson.

At 9.5 notices were posted out.

BAKED TREACLE LAYER

PUDDING

MAKE some light suet pastry, and roll it out rather thinly. Butter a pie dish, and place a layer of pastry at the bottom; cover this with a thin layer of treacle, and repeat until the dish is full, the last layer being of pastry.

Put this in a moderate oven and bake for one hour or more, according to its size.

IMMORTALS' DISCOMFORT

DO NOT CARE FOR FIRE RISKS

Paris, Jan. 13.

The danger of the Forty Immortals of the French Academy, benefitting by their immortality sooner than they had counted on has spread consternation among those venerable gentlemen the other morning.

They discovered that in the ancient Institute of France, where the gray-haired, uniformed academicians deliberate and vote so slowly pound out their dictionary, there was no means of fire prevention.

Perhaps the institute was built too long ago; or perhaps its caretakers simply have counted on the immortality of the occupants. In any case there is not an extinguisher on the premises, and the immortals themselves, warned by the famous Paul Valery, are not interested in tests of fire.

The disturbing information imparted by Valery brought a lively debate among the elders of literature and art, who promptly called a plenary session to discuss fire extinguishers. In detail, this session has just been held and led to the appointment of a special commission on the subject.

The commission, it is hoped, will solve the problem if it can find the money, and meanwhile has been instructed to draw up a report taking into account "the paucity of credits at the disposition of the institute for its personal use."

DOCTOR'S ERROR

INFORMATION KEPT
FROM PATIENT

NOMINAL DAMAGES

Judgment for five guineas against a doctor was given in the King's Bench Division, London, in the action in which the doctor was alleged, accidentally to have left the broken needle of a hypodermic syringe in a woman's body.

Mr. Norman Richards was briefed for plaintiffs and Mr. Henry Dickens for defendant.

Mr. Justice du Parcq said that as to some of the allegations of negligence, there was really no evidence. Unfortunately there was a good deal of dispute between plaintiffs and the doctor as to some incidents and conversations between them, but much of the case was common ground and he was not confronted with any great difficulty by the conflict of evidence.

His Lordship said it was quite clear that no negligence in the performance of the operation was proved against Dr. Pines. The injection was administered much as the previous ones were, though there might have been some difference in the posture of the patient.

It was suggested that the doctor did not use a suitable needle. Needles were all liable to break. They might break through careless handling, but there was no evidence that there had been any careless handling in this instance.

A needle might break because of an involuntary movement on the part of the patient. Mrs. Gerber was a very nervous woman, and Mr. Gerber was also anxious that she should not be told she was seriously ill. The doctor said he thought it was not wise in the circumstances to tell the patient the needle was in her body, but it seemed to his Lordship that as a general rule the patient in whose body a doctor finds that he has left some foreign substance was entitled to be told so at once.

LAYMAN'S VIEW

Speaking as a layman, he thought there was something to be said for the suggestion that it would have been wiser to have made the injection in the arm, but he could not possibly hold that it was negligent to make the injections in the body.

In His Lordship's view, it was most important that the doctor should have told either the patient, or her husband, before she left the surgery that there was a risk that the needle might move from where it was.

Dr. Pines said, and he was justified in the result, that he thought the needle would remain fixed where it was in the muscle. In the circumstances, His Lordship found that the doctor had not taken every reasonable step. The risk of telling the woman that the needle was in her body was not too great, and he ought to have taken that risk instead of letting her go home with a piece of foreign substance in her body.

His Lordship held there had been a breach of duty on the part of the doctor, but that the medical expenses, the hospital charges and the engagement of a housekeeper did not flow from that breach. Apart from some small items, the only damages he could award were for pain and suffering during the two or three days before the revelation of the fact that the needle was in the plaintiff's body.

Mrs. Gerber was entitled to nominal damages, and he gave judgment for plaintiffs for five guineas but without costs.

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

In Europe they call her "Lady of Loveliness" and in America, in her first American picture, Mady Christians, famous Viennese stage and screen star, has reaped triumph in "A Wicked Woman" coming soon to the Queen's Theatre. The new picture undoubtedly establishes her as one of the greatest dramatic actresses in years. The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, a dramatic cross section of a woman's soul, shows the glamorous star of "The Waltz Dream" as a modern American woman, struggling to protect her loved ones while herself in the shadow of a fearful past. Based on the sensational fiction story by Anne Austin, it gives Miss Christians a role that covers every human emotion. Her dynamic personality, beauty, and flawless acting hold her audience spellbound from the first scene to the final fade-out. Charles Brabin directed with deft hand, handling little human touches; the amazing dramatic plot and there is also a sensational courtroom document. Jean Parker is engaging and still powerfully dramatic as the wayward daughter, and William Henry injects both comedy and drama as the youthful reporter. Charles Bickford gives a virile performance as the newspaper editor who becomes the heroine's lover. Others adequately cast are Robert Taylor, Betty Furness, Zella Sears, DeWitt Jennings, Paul Harvey, Marilyn Harris, Sterling Holloway, Betty Jane Graham, Jackie Searle and George Billings.

"Queen's Affair"
In Anna Neagle and Fernand Graavey Herbert Wilcox believes he has found the perfect romantic team. Fernand Graavey, London-born, "Bitter Sweet" after a worldwide search for a young actor with the necessary attainments for the role, and his work with Anna Neagle in that film showed he was her ideal screen partner. Immediately after the premiere of "Bitter Sweet" Mr. Wilcox was asked by exhibitors to co-star them in another film, and he adopted the bold policy of putting them together again in a subject originally intended to co-star Jeanette MacDonald and Herbert Marshall, namely, "The Queen's Affair". "The Queen's Affair" is set in modern times, and is essentially a subject in which comedy and satire are of outstanding importance. For the first time in her career, Anna Neagle is called upon to play in several comedy sequences, and Fernand Graavey is given the opportunity to make use of his splendid light-comedy talents. "The Queen's Affair" is the big attraction at the King's Theatre on Wednesday.

"For Love of You"
Comedy, opera and gay spectacle are highlights of the super-feature offering "For Love of You" which comes to the Star to-day. The clever comedy team Arthur Riscoe and Maureen Wayne provide a plethora of fun with the hilarious situations in which the pair, on holiday in gay Venice, find themselves involved when with the best intentions in the world they seek to smooth out domestic differences between husband, in the shape of an egotistical tenor, and his pretty wife, played by Dinna Napier.

Franco Foresta, as the tenor and popular idol for his wonderful voice, renders selections from well-known operas, recorded on the film with excellent clarity. The theme-song "For Love of You", which gives its title to the picture, is a lilting melody destined to "catch on" with audiences. Scenically "For Love of You" is a delight to the eye, notably in the Venice carnival scene with its fleet of gondolas and lovely girls staged in a splendour which attests the large sums manifestly spent on the elaborate production.

"Cleopatra"

"Cleopatra", Cecil B. Mille's newest Paramount production, which tells the dramatic story of Egypt's glamorous Queen and her love affair is coming to the Alhambra and Central Theatre on March 16. Claudette Colbert, Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon play the principal roles, and the supporting cast includes Ian Keith, Joseph Schildkraut, C. Aubrey Smith, Gertrude Michael, Irving Pichel, William Farnum, Robert Warwick, Edwin Maxwell and Harry Beresford. The film is the adaptation of the screen play which was written by Waldemar Young and Vincent Lawrence. Of all love stories, the romantic side of Cleopatra, in perhaps the greatest love theme ever printed on any page, either history or fiction. Using Rome and Egypt in all their glories splendour for his background, DeMille has woven his screen story into a spectacle of entertainment. When Mary Antony, stalwart war and a staunch friend of Caesar, sets out to capture Egypt's beautiful Queen, little does he realize he was to get her. Not with sword and shield, but with his heart. And when love changed the Queen into a woman, the destiny of the entire world was changed. Staged against the background of Rome and Egypt, in their glory, the film utilized more than 5,000 actors, workmen and technicians to bring a faithful account of the undying love story of these two mortals to the screen.

"Kentucky Kernels"

Laid against a background of the sunny South, enhanced by Southern beauties, garden dances, gay melody and rollicking romance, "Kentucky Kernels" brought Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey to the King's Theatre to-day in their funniest, merriest and maddest vehicle. Establishing a precedent in Wheeler and Woolsey productions, "Kentucky Kernels" boasts a plot, strong and intriguing, plus romantic and comical situations, in which the funsters successfully demonstrate their inimitable singing, dancing and fun-making. Their comedy is keyed to a theme melody, "One Little Kiss", sung by the stars, Mary Carlisle, beautiful blonde leading lady, and Noah Beery. Mary Carlisle's golden loveliness; the pranks of "Spanky" McFarland as the child heir; and Noah Beery as the bona fide Colonel, contribute much to enliven the picture. Sleep 'n' Eat, a negro comedian, evokes many laughs in a minor role.

"Private Scandal"

The world's most entertaining pack of liars got together in a brand-new idea in mystery-thriller, a film called "Private Scandal" produced by Charles R. Rogers for Paramount. It opened yesterday at the Alhambra Theatre, with a cast headed by ZaSu Pitts, Phillip Holmes, Mary Brian, Ned Sparks and Lew Cody. Ned Sparks and ZaSu Pitts are an unique combination for a mystery film—but they give splendid performances in two of the most laugh-loaded roles they have had in years. Sparks is cast as the exasperated detective who eventually solves the mystery—while Miss Pitts is the excitable, bewitched secretary of the man who is the focal point of the problem. The picture was directed by Ralph Murphy. It is generous entertainment, combining as it does the essential thrills—and the too-often forgotten comedy.

"Biography of a Bachelor Girl"
In a screen play admirably suited to their talents Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery are again seen together at the Queen's Theatre in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Biography of a Bachelor Girl", directed by E. H. Griffith. This is the first time this popular team has been co-starred since the outstanding hit from the same studio, "When Ladies Meet". The new picture has all the charm and appeal of the former one, all the sophistication and bright dialogue, with the addition of some of the most breath taking outdoor scenes ever flashed on a screen. In the first place, the play is the celebrated "Biography of a Bachelor Girl", superbly written by S. N. Behrman. The dialogue seems to have remained almost intact in spite of Anita Loos, splendid adaptation to the new medium. Bearing the mark of any production by Irving Thalberg, "Biography of a Bachelor Girl" is admirably cast. Edward Everett Horton appears as the comical stuffed shirt, Nolan. Edward Arnold brings all his well known charm to the role of Feydak, Austrian composer. Una Merkel, as Shade, finds time between cocktails to fall in love. Charles Richman puts the same finesse into the screen characterization of Kinnicott as he did on the stage, where he created the role. And Greta Meyer is again the admirable servant, as Minnie. But most of all there is Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery, the perfect co-starring team. As Marion, sophisticated and artist, Miss Harding has never appeared in a more suitable role. And the part of Kurt, hard-boiled young editor, was surely made in order for Montgomery. The story treats humorously of a possible young man and woman in doubt between the joys of love and the duties of life, whether to write the story of her life.

knowing your skin will not suffer from the effects of exposure if you give it this special care.

For you need not have a dried out,

attention it needs in a trying climate,
follow this way regularly:

Spread Pond's Cold Cream generously

after exposure. Wipe off Cream and dirt. Apply more Cream. Remove.
Now your skin is thoroughly cleansed
and refreshed.

Always do this at bedtime, and leave on a little Cream overnight to keep the skin supple and restore the natural oils
dried out by sun and wind.

After each daytime cleansing, apply a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream to soothe, protect, and for a powder base. Don't forget to rub some into your hands!

Follow the Pond's way faithfully, and a peach-bloom skin is yours!

THE PACIFIC NAVAL SITUATION

In the discussions which have been provoked by Japan's denunciation of the Washington Naval Treaty, the fear has been expressed in some quarters that the inevitable tendency will be to cause an armaments race which, in the long run, may result in actual war. Arguing from the standpoint that when the treaty was drawn up in 1921 it averted the prospects of hostilities, it is now contended by certain observers—that, with Japan freed from treaty restrictions, the once-averted war may become a future certainty. Such a fear is easily understandable when it is borne in mind that the treaty was devised for the express purpose of ending a naval race which had become both expensive and dangerous. Nevertheless, calm consideration will show that the outlook today is by no means as perilous as might be supposed. A saving factor in the situation is to be discovered in a simple bit of geography. The three great naval Powers—Britain, the United States and Japan—are separated one from another by thousands of miles of sea. This, fortunately, means that any one of these nations can build a fleet which will provide national security for itself without necessarily menacing the national security of the other two. That was not the case in Europe during the period prior to the Great War, when there was unrestrained competition in naval armaments. That competition involved two nations which were geographically close together—Britain, and Germany—and it was inevitable that if Germany were to have a fleet strong enough to keep open her sea lanes to the outer seas, it had to be strong enough to dispute with Britain the control of waters vital to British safety. The reverse was also true: a British fleet strong enough to make England secure was automatically strong enough to cut Germany off from the rest of the world. Neither nation could therefore attain naval security without at the same time raising a direct menace to the security of the other. Fervid naval building resulted, and although this of itself was not the actual cause of the war, it was a circumstance which tended to increase tension rather than otherwise. The present situation, as between Britain, the United States and Japan, is vastly different. The United States fleet, for example, might be strong enough to keep the sea lanes open and to protect America's coasts, and yet be still too weak and diffused for large-scale manoeuvres aimed at either Japan or Britain. The same observation can be applied to the British and Japanese navies. This circumstance needs keeping in mind at the present time. Admittedly, it takes no account of the political aspect of the situation as between the three countries most vitally concerned with the Pacific situation, but it is, none the less, a factor which may well have an important influence on future developments.

NOTES OF THE DAY

GAS ATTACKS

In some foreign countries, notably Germany, certain measures have been taken to protect the people from gas attacks and to train them in methods of treatment. But at the best these measures can do little. How is it possible to ensure the safety of scores of millions of persons, who may be attacked suddenly from any quarter? In Britain practically nothing has been done, and though there is much talk now and then, the populace go about their daily work without giving much thought to the matter; and maybe they are right. At all events, they cannot make much of the few vague hints that are given from time to time. A technical journal, for example, suggests gas-proof rooms, to be occupied till the "all clear" signal is given. But how are forty millions to be provided with such refuges? Another instruction given in the same journal seems to be almost as impracticable. Mustard gas needs some time to take effect. Therefore, the skin should be immediately scrubbed with soap and hot water, for not less than five minutes, changing the water frequently. The eyes, being peculiarly susceptible, should be washed with warm water and bicarbonate of soda or a weak solution of salt. If a gas is used which irritates the lungs oxygen would have to be administered, or a stimulant injected hypodermically. Interesting, but oxygen and hypodermic instruments are not to be found in every street, nor even hot water and soap. It would seem that we should just have to "thole" what came to us.

NEW FASHION-MAKER

A movement is afoot in Germany to make women dress "Nordically." They are to free themselves of all foreign influence—and to attire themselves according to certain principles which are supposed to be fundamentally racial. It is not easy to get a clear view of those principles, but they have a strong flavour of the familiar saying that women's attention should be given mainly to three things—Church, children, and cooking. A woman's attire should be adapted to practical purposes. She is not to aim at being the "youthful beloved," for after these things do the alien southern races seek. She must have as her ideal the "motherly woman." Dress must not be for "showing off," it must be subservient and helpful to the development of the body. In a word, the German woman must make the body beautiful and not trust to clothing to that end. To neglect that principle is to incur physical and spiritual injury, which must lead to national disruption and racial disintegration, and race decides whether woman is a free being or a plaything. It is doubtful if women—even German women—will be able to order their lives on these exalted ideals. Woman is woman all the world over, and she is not likely to shed her femininity at the command of men who are in power to-day and to-morrow may count for nothing in the life of the nation.

NEW FASHION IN SKIRTS

A few weeks ago it was stated, with due reserve, that the hobble skirt is to be the next whim of fashion. Our elders will remember the short reign of that fantastic fashion, when women wore dresses so tight that they could scarcely walk. If they tried to run they had to "leap" like kangaroos. The latest news is that the hobble is actually to be worn, but only in the day-time. Women are to be permitted a natural walk in the evening. The dressmakers—they who must be obeyed—have decreed that the day-time skirt shall be a yard or less round the hem, and the general effect will be a "pencil." The straight and narrow effect will be emphasised by coats gathered at the waist and spread bell-shaped over the skirt. In the evening more than generous fullness will be allowed. Some of the new evening gowns will be six yards round the hem, and will be very full from the hips. This will be a relief from the present mode of constriction at the knees. In a word, women will be "loupers" during the day and striders at night.

The present situation, as between Britain, the United States and Japan, is vastly different. The United States fleet, for example, might be strong enough to keep the sea lanes open and to protect America's coasts, and yet be still too weak and diffused for large-scale manoeuvres aimed at either Japan or Britain. The same observation can be applied to the British and Japanese navies. This circumstance needs keeping in mind at the present time. Admittedly, it takes no account of the political aspect of the situation as between the three countries most vitally concerned with the Pacific situation, but it is, none the less, a factor which may well have an important influence on future developments.

NELSON WOULD BE AN AIRMAN

BY CAPT. NORMAN MACMILLAN

Capt. Macmillan in January 1918, was awarded the Military Cross for shooting down three enemy aeroplanes and driving down six others out of control. In 1919 he received the Air Force Cross in recognition of his War services with the Highland Light Infantry, the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Air Force.

THE rise and fall of nations rests upon the mutability of mankind. Every so often, time throws out some genius who grasps the spirit of the times.

If Nelson, the man who made England mistress of the seas, were alive to-day he would be an airman, and our people might then have some reason to sleep peacefully.

In 1758, when Nelson was born, the supremacy of England on the sea was not established. The French and Spanish Fleets were stronger than our own, both in numbers and in size of ships.

The boy Nelson possessed a spirit, one filled with the love of adventure. The mobility of the ship was then supreme; it was England's great fighting weapon. The call of the sea rang in his heart and at the age of 12 he sought his work in the Royal Navy.

He quickly proved a born sailor. Expert in seamanship and pilotage he had a natural aptitude for command. He was a post-captain at the age of 21.

The French Revolution brought England to war with France in 1793. Five years later Nelson, an admiral, 39 years of age, engaged the French Fleet in the Battle of the Nile and all but destroyed it. That victory marked the ascendancy of the British Navy. It foiled Napoleon's plans for invading England. At the Battle of Copenhagen in 1801 and Trafalgar in 1805 Nelson broke the power of Napoleon upon the sea.

There is a parallel in the Europe of to-day. Armed forces of the air—superior in strength to those of England—stand leashed in Continental countries. We need fear no invasion through might upon the waters. By air alone can the old threat upon the security of England be revived. At this present, vital moment that threat exists.

No genius, seeing how things stand, would ever dream of entering a Service other than the air.

The commander who would sweep havoc into the potential enemy of England must lead our fleet of aeroplanes. "The sea is England's glory" should be written in past tense. To-day, we ought to blazon in the skies, "The air is England's glory." If only that were so!

Nelson never achieved his victories by chance. In his personality he had everything on his side—youth, courage, skill in seamanship and pilotage, leadership that never hesitated to throw his own person at the enemy at the head of his men. Exultant was his cry "Westminster Abbey or Victory!"

Nelson learned his art of sea war in battle. About the coasts of Europe, the West Indies, and of South America he demonstrated his courage and skill, and gained promotion.

"Mr. Baxford is in a grand humour. Why wouldn't this be a good time to approach him about that job?"

Why We Should Go To War
There is not only danger of war in foreign commitments, but in every contact between nations.

War between England and Australia was only just averted by leaving Jardine and Larwood out of the Test team. Now comes a warning from a Mr. Scheine, lawyer to Tex Austin and "Councillor" to the Rodeo.

When Mr. Scheine heard that the Rodeo was not a success in England he said gravely:—

"I am very much concerned about this. There is danger of growing animosity between the two countries which should be on terms of closer friendship."

By the same argument we shall go to war with the United States the next time an American play is a flop in London.

To-day's Centenary
March 11, 1935.—Death of Lady Jane Walpole.

Gallant old Jane Walpole! They don't breed her like to-day. (You'll find her life in "Old Hongkong" I think the second volume.) She was Master of the Wancat Hunt, the first woman to fill that role. She weighed fifteen stone in her riding-boots (there's a pair of 'em still, in the county museum at Biggleswade); she rode astride, with a brandy-flask in each of her saddle-bags; she mopped up claret at her hunt-breakfasts as you or I, Gentle, might mop up tea. A great character; and a great lover of horses.

When she died she bequeathed to her stallion, Pindar, a pension of eighteen guineas a year. He survived until 1841, and the entire Hunt, in pink, was at his funeral. Little poor old Pindar cared.

Highbrows' Corner
"Popular beliefs are always wrong," said Lord Raglan at the British Association.

This raises a point of great interest to us thinking chaps. The belief that popular beliefs are always wrong is itself a popular belief.

What does His Nibs say to that? Now take a look at our use of "we" in the phrase "we thinking chaps."

A lot of you lads will be writing to us and saying our grammar is all wrong. We are told so quite often, by Headmasters and all sorts of important people. Well, we use "we" here deliberately, for literary and technical reasons. It's an instance of deferred prolepsis.

SLEEP A GREAT HEALER

GUARDING
CHILD

By A SPECIALIST

SLEEP is the great physical and mental restorative of man: he cannot do without it.

During sleep many things happen: the breathing becomes quiet and regular; physical and mental activity ceases and the body and mind sink into a state of calm and quiet relaxation. The blood-pressure falls, and it is during sleep that the great repair to the tissues and cells of the brain and the body takes place.

A night of calm and undisturbed sleep and we awake refreshed and repaired: the lost vitality of the day before has been silently replaced in the great laboratory of Nature.

One is often asked for how long we ought to sleep. Regarding this no hard and fast lines can be laid down. It is said that Napoleon was able to go for days without sleep and then make up for it with a sleep of 24 hours' duration. Lord Haldane said, I believe, that he never slept for more than 4 hours. But these are the exceptions, and such people may do with short hours of sleep; but the average individual cannot, without physical and mental detriment.

NOT ENOUGH SLEEP

As to whether we sleep enough—generally speaking, I should say the answer is, No. There are any number of people who do not get, or take, enough sleep. With them getting up in the morning is a struggle and they awake unrefreshed.

This big freighter recently went aground outside Halifax, Canada. The captain, who stayed on board after all others had been rescued, was swept away by a huge wave just as the ship cracked in two beneath him.

This unusual picture shows a hunt, hounds and all, in the market place of Melton Mowbray, England, ready for the chase. Both hunters and hounds seem to be enjoying the exceptional setting for the start of the hunt.

ed: the necessary "repair" has not had time to be carried out.

This deficiency, carried out over a long period of time, runs the victim down and keeps him or her in a state of being ever below par.

The cause for this state—in-sufficient sleep—is rarely guessed at. But it is a most potent source—and so unsuspected. Occasional late nights do no harm; it is the regular nightly shortage that in time must and does tell. It results in fatigue by day, in disinclination for work, and often in irritability and depression. Too, it produces inefficient work.

Innumerable people make the day too long and as a result never feel fit. I find one of my most successful prescriptions is, "Go to bed an hour earlier." It rarely fails to bring benefit to the health and an increase in general fitness, together with greater capacity for, and better, work.

In the case of children the matter is infinitely more important. It is lamentable to see young children dragged about, often half asleep, quite late at night. It should be made criminal; it is asking for disaster. For these young children become quickly devitalized that way and then, through lowered resistance, fall an easy prey to childish illnesses, such as the dangerous measles. Every mother who does this gravely wrongs her child—perhaps quite ignorantly.

MAXIMUM OF SLEEP

Infants—and puppies and kittens and all baby animals—require the maximum of sleep; here Nature sees to this. Children of from four to seven require twelve hours of sleep, and from eight to twelve ten hours as a minimum; older children require nearly as much. A child who has insufficient sleep cannot, and does not, do its school work as efficiently as the child who has thoroughly slept.

In the child nothing can ever take the place of adequate hours of sleep; many parents fail to realise this.

How much sleep then, does the adult require? Generally speaking, I should say, eight hours. There are, of course, exceptions to this; some may do satisfactorily on six or seven; some may require even ten. As people get old they generally require less. But, though they may do with fewer hours of actual sleep, it is imperative that they should have longer hours of rest in bed.

For those who have leisure to indulge in it, an afternoon nap is often very beneficial. It is particularly valuable to the elderly and in cases of neurasthenia.

OVER-TIREDNESS

The nervously exhausted will always sleep better at night if they have had a short nap in the afternoon. Many people sleep badly at night because they have gone to bed overtired; this may often be avoided if time can be found for sleep earlier in the day.

Active brain workers require longer sleep than those whose work does not lie this way; in them the wear and tear and the nervous energy spent is greater by far, and the repair required is greater also.

Many late nights on end—except for the fortunate few who can stop in bed till midday—must prove injurious in the long run. Apart from interfering with the work of the day, it tends to slow but steady exhaustion of the nervous system. Many cases of "nerves" can be directly attributed to this habit.

No great golfer, tennis player, or expert in any other sport ever dreams of anything but a long night's sleep before a big event. Hand and eye must be steady and fit and in harmony and conjunction; and this cannot be after a night of little sleep.

MISERABLE MORNINGS

If one wakes up in the morning fit and fresh, and with the feeling of having thoroughly slept, the amount of sleep has doubtless been adequate. But how many of this? The first hour or two in the morning is a misery to many people; for the simple reason that they have not had sufficient sleep.

There is probably a good deal of truth in the old maxim that an hour before midnight is worth two after. For those who get insufficient sleep during the working week, the best restorative is to spend Sunday morning in bed—and asleep.

Do some people sleep too much? A few do. These who are lethargic and obese are the ones inclined this way. The long hours of sleep with this minority tend to the putting on of more weight; with greater weight comes more lethargy; and with more lethargy the desire for increasing hours of sleep.

A vicious circle is produced. Those of this type are often the victims of unsuspected indifferent health. They are the "self-poisoned" individuals whose auto-intoxication makes them unduly heavy and lethargic. They are mostly sedentary and eat too much. Let them cut down their intake and take regular exercise and the evil for unduly long hours of sleep will pass away.

Very few people are really born lazy. They are mostly the victims of the unsuspected indifferent health I have mentioned. Mind and body are clogged with their own unburned-up waste products.

Elimination of these by the correction of faulty habits will replace the engendered physical and mental sluggishness with an alertness previously unknown.

The Duke of Marlborough (son of the former Consuela Vanderbilt), his wife, the Duchess, and their children, Lady Caroline, Lady Sarah and the Marquis of Blandford, are seen here arriving in New York from their home in England. The duke succeeded to the title only last year. The dukedom was created in 1702.

The Japanese freighter Hokuman Maru sinking in the midst of a wild storm on the North Pacific was in desperate need of assistance when the President Jackson came alongside. All her crew was rescued.

line when Tso kicked it in, and that actually the ball passed over the cross-bar before dropping on to Chan's head.

THE ESSENTIAL SUPERIORITY

The essential superiority of the Chinese lay in their half backs and forwards. Tso Ah-fai, Ho Ching-ying and Leung Wing-chai constituted a brilliant middle line, while the forwards made fine sweeping movements which to counter extracted the very best from A. V. Gosano and Chris Pile.

Chan Chun-wo, restored to the inside left position as a result of Pile's absence through injury, was the mainstay of a very enterprising attack. Only the masterly defence of Gosano and Pile kept Chan and his colleagues from piling on goals.

Keneighan had the measure of Lee Shek-yau, but Parker was far from confident against the Tam-Tso combination and was as often out-positioned that double work was placed on Pile's shoulders.

I say without hesitation that Pile played the game of his life. He did not make a single mistake and some of his interceptions were the last word in perfect timing and anticipation. When Gosano had left Pile held the fort single-handed and never looked like being passed.

Gosano up to the time of his unfortunate dismissal was a very outstanding performer, and the Association owed everything to the two backs. They relieved at least a dozen situations pregnant with danger.

McGuire's tackling was good, but his constructive efforts have been much better. Parker was also extremely weak in this phase and did not give Bickford a decent pass right through the match. Keneighan was about the most impressive of a hard-working, but by no means outstanding trio.

ONE BIG MISTAKE

Up forward B. Gosano did a spate of work which yielded nothing. The biggest mistake made was the starving of Bickford, who, whenever he did get the ball made the Chinese defence think more than the rest of the attack put together.

An unaccountable concentration on the right wing was preferred. Fairly well though he played, Tommy Pile was far inferior to Bickford, and it was a grave error to give him so much of the ball.

GERMAN CLUB EXPECTED

TO PLAY LOCAL INTERPORT XI

There is a distinct possibility, if fixtures can be arranged, of the Shanghai German Club hockey team visiting Hongkong at the end of this month to play a series of matches with the Colony Interport side and the services.

Notification of the intending visit was communicated to the Hongkong Hockey Association on Saturday, and a special meeting of the Association is to be called this week to consider the matter.

The Shanghai German Club have been champions of the Shanghai Hockey League for the past two years, and included in their ranks are some of the finest players in the northern port.

MAY MAKE INTERPORT POSSIBLE

If the matches can be arranged the German Club will be the first team from Shanghai to play in Hongkong, and this will undoubtedly do much to help on the inauguration of Interports between Hongkong and Shanghai.

It is also intimated that should the team travel south they will visit Macao.

SERIAL STORY

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brookman

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 22, works in a silk mill. She and her brother, PHIL, 19, support their invalid father. STEVE MEYER, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days. Later that evening Gale goes skating on the river, runs through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he sets his car but when he returns she is gone. Brian has come home after two years in Paris, convinced he can never become an artist and ready to go to work in the mill. VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian. Brian sees Gale in the mill and is amazed to find she is an employer. Vicky telephones that her car has broken down. Brian takes her home and on the way they witness a street fight between PHIL HENDERSON and ED VOGEL. The fight ends when a policeman appears. Later, driving home, Brian thinks of Gale and wonders what her name is.

CHAPTER XII

The line in the cafeteria shuffled forward, past walls of bean and tomato soup, past trays of cabbage and macaroni and cheese and beef stew, on to the small, glittering mounds of red and gold gelatin, the prunes and solid-looking wedges of apple pie.

The heavy porcelain dishes chattered and voices buzzed—now rising and lowering in volume, broken in upon by shrill laughter or a sharp exclamation. It was lunch time for the day shift in the mill.

Gale Henderson, halted by the line in front, rested her tray against the steam table. She nodded and said, "Yes—the tomato soup," to the woman across the counter. Some one joggled Gale's elbow as the woman set the bowl on the tray and the thick red liquid splashed. Gale turned. She heard the voice of a girl in front:

"Suppose you heard about the fight last night?"

"You mean Vogel and Phil Henderson?" It was a different girl speaking now.

"Yeah. Know what started it?"

"Sure. What all these guys see in that dame—but I guess it was some fight! Phil ought to know better than to try to cut in on Ed Vogel."

"Say, I thought it was just the other way around!"

The first girl shook her head knowingly. "No, I've got the straight of it," she said. "Blanche Ryan told me and she used to go around with Ruby all the time. Blanche says it's the limit—the way Ruby is always two-timing guys. Just the same, Phil ought to leave Vogel alone. Ed Vogel can lick any man in the mill. That's what my brother says."

The two girls had reached the end of the line and made their way toward a table. Gale halted, holding her tray. Colour flamed in her cheeks. She was angry at the girls, angry at Phil. What a way for him to behave! No wonder he'd left the house so early that morning. Fighting with brute like Ed Vogel! Never a girl like Ruby Griffith! That's who they meant, of course.

She wished she didn't have to sit with anyone at lunch to-day. But she did. There were no individual tables in the mill cafeteria. There was Josie Gridley at a table where there was a vacant place. Gale made her way toward it.

Josie said, "Hi, Gale. Sure there's room for you," and pushed some dishes aside. "Well," she went on, "what do you think of the new boss?"

"The new boss?"

Josie nodded. "Brian Westmore," she explained. "The old man's son. They say he's going to work here now—that is, if you can call it work, sitting in a swell office like Thatcher's, giving orders and all that. That was him Thatcher was piloting around yesterday. Didn't you see 'em?"

"Yes," Gale said, "I saw them, but what makes you think Brian Westmore's going to stay here? Maybe he's just home for a visit."

Josie's nod was negative and emphatic. "No," she said, "Bill Keeley knows a fellow in the business office and he said—this fellow Bill knows, I mean—that young Westmore's got a special office, right next to Thatcher's. Gee, he's swell looking! Don't you think so? Tall and dark and such swell clothes. They say he's been everywhere—all round the world."

"And he paints pictures," the girl across the table put in. "That's what he was doing in Paris. Painting pictures!"

"I'll bet that wasn't all he did," her neighbour added knowingly. "I've seen it in the movies—the way they cut loose in Paris. Champagne and swell parties and girls dressed up in feathers and not a stitch of anything else. I saw a movie just last week where there was a fellow who was an artist."

"What I want to know," Josie interrupted, "is why he came back to this place. Imagine a guy with the money Brian Westmore's got, able to go anywhere he wants to and do anything he pleases. Imagine coming to this place!"

There was a chorus of agreement. "Gee, I know what I'd do," the girl across the table began, but again Josie cut her short.

"Look," she said, pointing to the clock on the wall. "Seven minutes and you've got to be back on the job. Wonder how long Mr. Brian Westmore gets for lunch. D'you suppose they cut his pay if he's a minute late?"

"Well, they'll cut yours," the other girl snapped back. "I wouldn't care how many new boxes we got if only it wasn't so hot and close. Honest, this morning I could hardly breathe!"

"It was bad," Gale agreed. "Worse than usual."

Josie pushed her chair back. "I'll drop in and mention the fact to Thatcher," she said sarcastically. "Or Mr. Westmore. I know they'd be glad to do anything to make their dear employees happier!"

Josie arose and a moment later Gale followed her. She joined the throng in the hall just as the warning bell rang. "If only I knew what to do about Phil," she thought again. "If only I knew how to help him!"

She was back at her place, hands ready, a full minute ahead of time. The warm, moist air pressed about her. Now the spindles were dancing again. The machines roared. Sixty women in blue dresses, heads and fingers moving as though they were machines, too, clamped on bobbins, twined the thread, snapped them off. Human arms and machine arms; human fingers and machine fingers; up and down, up and down—

That was the afternoon Connie Bauman fainted. Gale didn't see anything about it until she heard Fisher, the foreman, saying something in a loud voice. Gale turned and saw Connie on the floor. Another girl was leaning over her and Fisher was beside them.

"Here, you!" he called to Gale. "Help me get her out of here!"

"They had to carry her. Connie's eyes opened when they were in the corridor. She tried to speak but, though her lips moved, no sound came. They took her into a door marked, 'Emergency,' through a little room in which there was a couch.

A crowd of half a dozen had gathered about the door. Someone said, "They ought to keep her head down. They ought to put water on her face. Another said, 'My sister fainted once—"

"Get back to your machines," Fisher ordered. "I'll take care of this."

Gale, turning into the hall, almost walked into a tall young man in a brown suit. It was Brian Westmore. "What's happened?" he asked.

"Was it an accident—is anyone hurt?"

Gale said, "A girl fainted. She's in there—"

She slipped past him then, hurrying down the hall. "Wait a minute!" Brian called. "He took a step after her, the girl apparently did not hear. She was out of sight in another instant, disappearing through a door from which came the grinding roar of the machines.

Connie did not come back to work that afternoon. Voices buzzed in the wash room at quitting time. Someone said Connie'd been warned by a doctor that her lungs were infected. Another said, no, it wasn't her lungs; it was her heart. There were rumours that she'd been rushed to the hospital, that her brother had come for her, that Connie had recovered completely and walked home.

"I like to faint myself," a girl beside Gale fretted. "Hot as it was to-day? It's had enough most of the time, but to-day—"

"Yes," Gale agreed, "it was worse than usual."

"Know what I think's the matter with Connie?" the other went on. "What?"

"I think she's starving herself, that's what I think. She doesn't buy any lunch, you know. Just brings something. All she had the other day was an apple—I know because I saw her eating it here in the wash room. She said something about not being hungry and having had a big breakfast, but I didn't believe a word of it. Connie lives with her brother and his wife and he ain't been working, you know. Laid off a month ago. I don't think they've got anything but just what Connie makes—"

Gale nodded. She said, "Yes, I think that's what's the matter with Connie. She shouldn't do it. She won't be able to work if she doesn't eat."

The other girl turned away. Gale put on her coat and hat and went down the corridor. Outside she faced Brian Westmore. He was smiling and he said, "I thought if you were going down the street you might let me walk along with you."

BOY SCOUT RALLY

COMPETITION FOR PRINCE OF WALES HANNER

At a scout rally at Volunteer Headquarters on Saturday afternoon, an inter-Troop competition was held for the Prince of Wales Hanner. The competition is the first of three to take place this year.

The various troops were inspected by the local Scout Commissioner, the Rev. N. V. Halward. Paymaster Commander K. Lawder, O.B.E., R.N., of the Deep Sea Scouts, was the judge.

The competition consisted of four events comprising ambulance work, uses of the scout stave, deduction, and a compass test. The competing troops were also required to give a five minute entertainment each. For this event a team of six boys from each troop was allowed, and in the other events a team of four boys were drawn from each troop.

The troops present were, the Sea Scouts; 1st Hongkong Troop (St. Joseph's); 2nd Hongkong Troop (Cathedral R.C.); 4th Hongkong Troop (Murray Barracks); 7th Hongkong Troop (King's College); 10th Hongkong (St. Paul's College); 13th Hongkong Troop (no official name); 16th Hongkong Troop (Wah Yan College); 1st Kowloon Troop (St. Andrew's); 4th Kowloon Troop (Garrison's); 5th Kowloon Troop (Roving Fifth); 6th Kowloon Troop (Dyce-an Boys' School); and 11th Kowloon Troop (Wah Yan College).

The results of the tests have yet to be worked out.

DEATH PROFITS

BRITISH ARMS COMMISSION BEGINS WORK

London, Mar. 10. Britain's effort to control the international arms racket began to-day, when a preliminary meeting of the members of the Royal Commission of Inquiry into the manufacture of private arms was held.

The only discussion that took place was on questions of procedure.

The Commission will not begin to hear evidence until next month, owing to the fact that one of its members is at present abroad. Sir John Eldon, banker, former Lord Chief Justice of Appeal, is Chairman of the Commission.

The members are Sir Thomas Allen, Dame Rachel Crowley, Sir Phillip Gibbs, Professor Guttridge, Sir Kenneth Lee and Mr. James Spencer.

The disclosures made during the United States senate committee's investigation into the arms traffic lend added interest to the committee's task. It was these disclosures which caused the British Government to institute the inquiry.

The names of many prominent Britons were mentioned during the course of the American investigations.—British Wireless.

ST. JOHN AMBULANCE

Eight members of the Railway Division will also receive the Long Service Medal.

SEE AND HEAR

NEW ERA COMMENCES IN BROADCASTING

Hamburg, Mar. 10. The remarkable development which has taken place in television during the past twelve months is exemplified by the requests from London, New York and other capitals that parts of the heavyweight boxing contest between Max Schmeling and Steve Hannas to-day should be televised.

In accordance to the requests, the German authorities have become the pioneers in actual international television broadcasts. Television broadcasting, which will be introduced in Great Britain by the B.B.C. in November, has been in existence in Germany for many months, and forms a regular part of the Berlin programmes.

The decision of the B.B.C. to commence television in November marks a new era in British broadcasting.

Immediately transmissions begin, ten million people in and around London will be able to see as well as hear the artists in the broadcasting studios.

The Baird system, which has now reached perfection, will be used in Britain. In this system, there is a complete absence of flicker on the screen of the television set, and the picture is as clear as on a talkie-screen.

Broadcasts will be made on ultra short waves, and receivers may be purchased for £50 and £90. These receivers will be complete sight and sound instruments, capable of receiving ordinary radio programmes, televised programmes or both.

The instrument is housed in a cabinet no larger than the present radio console type. The screen, which looks like an ordinary piece of looking glass, is 12 by 9 inches, and the images can be seen in broad daylight. In all essential television programmes in London will be miniature talking picture shows.

Transmissions will be either from a stage (such as plays, boxing matches or artists), or from cinematographic film, which can be developed in half-an-hour and televised.

Thus the London "Hater" will see, as well as hear, His Majesty the King when he gives his next New Year's Eve greeting to the world.

Colonial listeners at present catered for by the Empire radio service need not look forward to television for many years to come. Owing to the large side-frequency involved, none but ultra short waves, which have a maximum transmitting range of 100 miles, can be used.—Reuter Special.

LESSON SERMON

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, HONGKONG

"Man" was the subject of the Lesson Sermon in all Churches of Christ Scientist, yesterday. The Golden Text was "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way." (Psalms 37:23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." (Genesis 1:26, 27).

The Lesson Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Scriptures inform us that man is made in the image and likeness of God. Matter is not that likeness. The likeness of Spirit cannot be so unlike Spirit. Man is spiritual and perfect; and because he is spiritual and perfect, he must be so understood in Christian Science. God is the creator of man, and, the divine Principle of man remaining perfect, the divine idea or reflection, man, remains perfect. Man is the expression of God's being." (p. 476; p. 470).

BRITISH LEGATION

PERMANENT OFFICE IN NANKING

Peiping, Mar. 10. It is learned in British Legation circles that Sir Alexander Cadogan, British Minister to China, is proceeding to Nanking to-morrow in connection with preparations for the establishment of a permanent Legation office in Nanking to facilitate his regular visit to the capital.—Central News Agency.

Recreio Defeated By Temperament

The Recreio should have persisted in this type of game instead of losing their heads after the interval. It suited the Chinese admirably to find their bodily discomfort more important to the Recreio than the ball. It allowed them to regather their scattered forces and to make an all-round improvement. The now-disjointed Portuguese raids were confidently repulsed by Li Tin-sang and his colleagues while Tam Kong-pak had more of the ball and made fairly good use of it.

Although it was Fung King-cheung's wonderful shot which gave the Chinese the deciding goal, Tam was the real menace to the Recreio defence. Too Kwal-shing was too much of a fourth half back to be of use in the attack and Wong Mee-shun was useless on the left wing. This, plus the absence of Ip Pak-wa for three parts of the game left Tam and Fung on their own. It speaks volumes for the second half decline of the Recreio intermediates that these two players were able to win the game.

LEUNG SHINES IN DEFENCE

That Leung In-chun, Leung Wing-chui and Lau Hing-choi improved out of all knowledge after an uncomfortable first half was manifest in the parallel collapse of the Recreio forwards. Leung Wing-chui was very fine in defence and finally had B. Gosano under his thumb. Leung In-chun remained steady right through, but Lau did not find form until late in the game.

Lau Mau had a bad day, and Li Tin-sang saved the Chinese from being completely overrun in the first half. But as a pair of backs they only inspired confidence in the last quarter of an hour.

Tang Yat-ming had a surprisingly small amount of work to do in view of the trend of the game. He performed quite well, although he should never have conceded the goal he did. He had the choice of doing the right or wrong thing. He chose the latter, caught the ball instead of punching it, and the next minute found himself in the net.

SPLENDID LEADERSHIP

The Recreio's four fine chances in the first half were each ultimately lost. The half was a very interesting one, with a number of exceptionally clever movements which started round about the halfway line. B. Gosano figured prominently in each of them and it is a long time since I have seen better forward line leadership.

South China did not remain very long in arrears. A sudden attack down the right wing found the ball in the Recreio goalmouth. It was half cleared to Wong Mee-shun who lobbed the ball back and A. V. Gosano attempted to kick half-way, but missed completely. As always, Fung King-cheung was right on the spot, and that made it one-ill.

Persistent fouling ruined the second half football. B. Gosano, Delgado, Lau Hing-choi, Leung Wing-chui, Bowler, Wong Mee-shun and Fung King-cheung in turn forgot about the ball and went for the man. It was not to be wondered that goals looked as unlikely as a heat-wave in Iceland. Then, again unexpectedly came South China's second and deciding goal. Wong Mee-shun neatly tricked Silva-Motta into a false pass, but Gosano crossed the ball to Fung King-cheung who was standing just inside the penalty area. Without hesitation the sharp-shooter hit the ball and found the corner of the net, Marques being at least a second too late in his dive.

The Recreio tried desperately hard in the last few minutes. A. V. Gosano moved up to the attack, but the gods, who had already been cold-shouldered, were not disposed to offer new opportunities and the Recreio attacks petered out against an eight-man defence.

Rallies were sharp and short, and the whole match was over in less than an hour. It was good entertaining tennis, with Cheng satisfying one as to his improvement. The recent Manila trip obviously did him a lot of good, and from what I have been told Cheng received several helpful tips from Moon the Australian ace. Hongkong will watch Cheng's experiences and fortunes in America with much interest.

The match was officiated by umpired by Paul Kong, and both players received an ovation from a fair sized crowd.

One case each of Diphtheria, Typhoid Fever, and Measles, were reported to the local health authorities on Friday.

NEW BRITISH SCHOOL

GOVERNMENT LETS CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION

Work on the actual building of the new Central British School will commence almost instantly.

Messrs. Cheong Hing & Co., have been awarded the Government contract for this work. It is expected that the school will be completed within 16 or 18 months.

It is proposed to erect a Senior School for boys and girls to accommodate some 360 pupils with future extensions planned for a further 180 pupils.

A large playing field is to be laid out with probably a grand stand, pavilion and dressing rooms.

In a separate building adjoining the main entrance gates there will be the caretaker's quarters, bicycle store, and garage.

In the main building there will be 12 class rooms each to accommodate 30 pupils; an assembly hall to seat some 480 persons in the auditorium, and some 100 persons in the gallery. There will be a small stage, with dressing rooms, and cinematograph machine room.

There will be a chemistry laboratory, physics laboratory, lecture theatre, geography room, sewing room, cooking room, art room, manual instruction room, library, and luncheon room.

Accommodation will be provided for the headmaster, the mistress, the mistress, and the prefects.

A separate playground is arranged for boys, and also for girls, and in addition a covered playground with a full sized gymnasium over.

An approach road some 55 feet wide with an avenue of trees on each side has been planned leading up to the school from Argyle Street, and will at some future date be extended to encircle the school buildings and playing field.

Mr. W. A. Cornell, F.R.I.B.A., F.S.I., designed the plans for the new building.

FOOTBALL MATCH RESULTS IN UGLY INCIDENT

An ugly incident in which it is alleged players and spectators took part in a free-for-all fight on the Kowloon football ground on Saturday, occurred after the match between the South China "A" and the Club de Recreio.

It is stated that the incident arose out of an argument between one of the Chinese spectators and several of the Portuguese players shortly after 6 p.m., and some of the Portuguese are alleged to have assaulted the Chinese. Other Chinese resented this and immediately went to his assistance, and the affair developed into a free-for-all fight. The police were quickly on the scene, and the crowd was dispersed, four men being arrested in connection with the incident.

TWO PLAYERS SENT OFF IN AMAZING SOCCER GAME

RECREIO DEFEATED BY "TEMPERAMENT"

FOUR GOALS MISSED IN THE FIRST HALF AGAINST S. CHINA

LEAGUE LEADERS RETAIN RECORD

(By "Veritas")

Recreio ..... 1 S. China "A" ..... 2

Recreio:—E. Marques; A. V. Gosano and Boven; Silva-Netto, Boltrao and V. Marques; D'Aquino, Delgado, B. Gosano, Gomes, and Alves. S. China "A":—Tang Yat-ning; Li Tin-sang and Lau Mau; Leung In-chun, Leung Wing-chui and Lau Hing-choi; Tso Kwai-shing, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheung, Ip Fak-wa and Wong Mee-shun.

The so-called "big match temperament" plays just as important part in football matches as in other forms of sport; certainly it had a tremendous influence on this game at the Railway Ground on Saturday and was largely responsible for a result which went against the run of play.

Three times within the first twenty minutes the ball was smashed against South China's cross-bar from less than ten yards range and each shot reflected over-eagerness by the shooter. First Boreale Gosano broke right through and with only Tang to beat shot a little wildly and struck the framework. Three minutes later Delgado followed suit and almost immediately afterwards Gomes repeated the trick. The Delgado missed a glorious opportunity by fumbling the ball when unmarked within the goal area before Gosano's high part shot, part centre was followed up by Gomes who bundled Tang and the ball over the goal-line.

SHOULD HAVE BEEN FIVE

After half an hour's play the Rebels were not going up and they should have been five. Before the interval even this slender lead was lost when A. V. Gosano mis-kicked in front of goal and Fung King-cheung had nothing to do but to slam the ball past Marques.

South China were lucky to get away with the points, because at no time did they play like a champions team. Barely before this season has the defence been completely outwitted as in the initial stages of the match. Gosano, Delgado and Gomes waited round the half backs and left Li and Lau spreadeagled.

Gosano magnetised the opposition so completely that he continually drew them all out of position before making an adroit pass to a colleague. It only needed ordinary steadiness in shooting to leave South China hopelessly trailing. But that steadiness was not forthcoming, and the Chinese, making full use of their only opportunities, scored twice and won the game.

TOO MUCH BAD TEMPER

Had the play maintained the high standard reached in the first twenty minutes this would have been one of the most entertaining matches of the season. But weak refereeing which permitted players to get away with blatant fouls, and encouraged them to persist in such tactics, helped the exchanges to degenerate into a display of man-hunting in the course of which the ball became but a secondary consideration.

There were lots of highly regrettable incidents which demanded a firm line of action by the official. Unhappily this was not taken and in the end personal feeling was running very high. True Delgado had his name taken for an elaborate foul over seen on local grounds, but Wong Mee-shun, Tso Kwai-shing and Leung Wing-chui were allowed to get away with equally as dangerous forms of tackling. It was pure war and quite inexcusable.

Until the Chinese netted the equaliser the Recreio played splendid football. They not only monopolised the game, but set a pace and a standard of play which had the Chinese quaking. The swift tackling of A. V. Gosano and Boven quickly broke up South China's attempts to assume the offensive, while the excellent constructive labours of Boltrao, Silva-Netto and Marques paved the way for a series of brilliant attacks by the vanguard.

SKILFUL MANOEUVRES

Gosano's skilful manoeuvres which had the effect of drawing Li Tin-sang and Lau Mau away from the front of the goal constantly placed Tang Ming-yat and his charge in jeopardy. The four lucky escapes which they had already been told.

FLARING TEMPER AND MANY THRILLS

THE BRILLIANCE OF C. PILE

(By "Veritas")

CAAF. .... 1 H.K.F.A. .... 0

CAAF:—Wong Wing; Mak So and Li Tin-sang; Ho Chor-ying, Tsui Ah-fai, and Leung Wing-chui; Tso Kwai-shing, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheung, Chan Chun-wo, and Lee Shek-yu. H.K.F.A.:—Coker; A.V. Gosano and C. Pile; Keneghan, McGuire and Parker; T. Pile, B. Gosano, Higgins, Ridley, and Bickford.

OVER FIVE THOUSAND wildly excited Chinese watched their favourites win one of the most astonishing and eventful matches in the annals of local football when the Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation met the Hongkong Football Association in the season's second contest for the Governor's Cup at Caroline Hill yesterday.

Incident followed incident, and thrill succeeded thrill with such rapidity that the crowd's vocal demonstrations made practically one continuous roar. Seldom have I seen so much excitement crowded into a short period as in the last fifteen minutes of this match. First Li Tin-sang received marching orders; then A. V. Gosano was sent off; in desperate efforts to score an equaliser the Football Association hit the cross-bar, missed a penalty and allowed three open goals to go begging.

FROM FOOTBALL TO FOOTBRAWL

The Chinese, a better team all round, played finely until Li caught Sergt. Leley's eagle and reproving eye. Then they fell right away and what before was football became footbrawl. Offences, some technical, others very deliberate and not a little dangerous, were committed every other minute, while the already overheated players became more and more unmanageable under the influence of the partisan crowd.

The closing ten minutes were more in the nature of a dog fight than a display of football, but even this could not rob the game of its thrills.

The Chinese won not so much because they were a superior team, but because the Association vanguard hadn't a shot between them. Ridley twice ballooned over the bar, from four yards range, and capped a wretched afternoon by making an awful lurch of a penalty.

It was a thousand pities that the players could not hold their tempers, for the first three-quarters of the game contained lots of splendid and entertaining football. The sending off of Li Tin-sang was, I think, a real surprise to most people. For my part I did not see what happened, except that there was a scrimmage in front of goal, in the course of which Li must have seriously fouled somebody.

A GOAL THAT WASN'T A GOAL. Anyway Sergt. Leley's finger firstly pointed inexorably to the pavilion and then to the penalty spot. Less than five minutes later A. V. Gosano, who had come up to over the halfway line to help concentrate the Association attacks came into conflict with Fung King-cheung. Again it was difficult to see exactly what happened, but I think Fung fouled Gosano and the Recreio players lashed out. Anything he also went off and the teams fought out the closing minutes with ten men each and the Chinese goal bombarded from all angles.

To cap everything in this match of many incidents, the Chinese scored the winning goal which was never a goal. The ball was sent hard forward on the right and Tso Kwai-shing chased it; it was obviously going out but had actually bounced a yard over the line when Tso put his foot to the ball, lofted into the middle for Chan Chun-wo to head into an open goal. So convinced (and rightly too) were the Association defenders that the ball was out of play, that Coker made no attempt to save, although he could have done so with ease.

It was a very unsatisfactory goal, but after consulting a linesman the referee awarded it. Nevertheless, being right down that end of the field, I can vouch that the ball was well over the goal line.

Championship Tennis This Afternoon

FINCHER MEETS SHUTE

The continuance of the open tennis championships to-day brings several of the Colony's best players into action. The programme is confined to singles with nine matches scheduled. Most interesting of them all is the first round tilt between E. C. Fincher and E. L. H. Shute.

Fincher is firmly favoured to win, and is, in fact, expected to go on to the semi-final, but he will have no cake-walk against Shute, who has as much experience of tournament tennis behind him as Fincher.

Shute's performances in club tennis since his arrival in the Colony has emphasised that he is a player who can hold his own in the best of company. He is a hard hitter, and favours top-spin driving. Fincher's heavily cut shots may nullify Shute's ground strokes.

Tennis Kwook should not unduly worry S.A. Runjahn, although the Chinese is a steady player and is bound to offer stiffer opposition than Sinder received in the first round.

PAGH'S TASK

If Pagh can forget that Ho Ka-lau is a high ranking player, an Inter-porter and one of last year's semi-finalists he may give the C.R.C. exponent a good run for his money. Pagh can pull out some very good tennis indeed, and if he can play anything like a normal game the match is bound to provide some keen and interesting exchanges.

Paul Koz, H.D. Runjahn and Tsui Yung-pai look safe for comfortable passages into the third round. Here is this afternoon's complete programme.

GUY CHENG'S DRIVING

Impresses At C.R.C.

FINE TENNIS

(By "Veritas").

Guy Cheng's powerful driving, almost annihilated Tsui Wai-pui when these two tennis stars met in an exhibition match at the Chinese Recreation Club yesterday afternoon, and it was quite sufficient to give China's Davis Cup nominee victory in straight sets, the scores being 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Those spectators who recalled Cheng's last appearance in Hongkong—nearly two and a half years ago—must have been highly impressed with the progress made by this young player.

Cheng had not only changed his grip, but a good deal of his style of game, the power of Cheng's drives can be more readily imagined. The Shanghai player gained a beautiful length and perfect control from the start, and while it is true he made a certain number of mistakes it is equally accurate to observe that it was his fine ground strokes which gave him such a decisive win.

One of Cheng's best shots was a running forehand drive in which excellent footwork played an important part. His backhand was as stylish as ever, but much more of an attacking stroke than in 1932. But in addition to power in his driving Cheng made admirable placements which kept Tsui on the move from corner to corner. A deceptive variation in flight and pace were other important contributory factors to the punishing and point-winning shots.

Up at the net Cheng did not show Davis Cup class. He made a hash of two easy "kills" volleyed one ball very weakly into the net and only once scored outright from the forecourt. These were the only real blemishes on an otherwise attractive display.

TSUI'S BIG WEAKNESS

Tsui played well in the first set and then went to pieces. His hitting-on the run was about the worst this youngster has shown since getting into the forefront of local tennis. His feet were badly played in taking Cheng's deep drives to the backhand corner and in consequence he could not obtain any lift on the ball.

Tsui hit quite well when he had plenty of time to position himself, and he also pulled out three spectacular passing shots after being driven outside the court boundaries. But his timing was faulty to the extreme, and his sense of anticipation much below usual standard so that Cheng often caught him on the wrong foot with a shot to his forehand corner.

Tsui played fighting tennis in the first set when he faced a live-in deficit, and did extraordinarily well to pull up to 4-5 before losing the stanza. During this period he brought his drop shot into active and successful use and lured Cheng into errors with heavily chopped half court placements which the visitor continually netted in end-vours to drive.

A TRUCE TO THIS FOOTBRAWL

COLONY SOCCER SUFFERS

LOST SENSE OF PERSPECTIVE

(By "Veritas")

If Saturday's game between South China and the Recreio and yesterday's encounter between the Federation and Association reveal anything it is that local footballers are losing their sense of perspective and proportion. They are sacrificing much that is the best in football either to create, sustain or break a record, or to grab a piece of silver. The ethics of the game are going by the board for material gain.

Tactics displayed at the Railway Ground and Caroline Hill were disgraceful; an insult to a great game which has sportsmanship as its keynote. Legitimate tackling and fair play is in danger of becoming a thing of the past in Hongkong soccer if teams are allowed to behave as they did in these two matches.

NOT PERSONAL QUARREL

The great thing which has to be instilled into the minds of the delinquents is that football is a game, not a personal quarrel. Neither national, club nor personal honour is at stake in the winning or losing of a game; that is decided by the manner in which the game is played.

Admittedly the ego cannot be cut out of a football match like an appendix, and to win is to satisfy that ego. But for goodness sake let players win honourably by decent, clean and sporting tactics. To allow tempers to flare because the opposition are proving themselves better players is about the worst gesture imaginable. Players seem to lose sight of the ethical ruling that defeat can sometimes be as magnificent as victory.

Displays such as those seen this last week-end are the more pitiful by reason of the fact that all of the players concerned can, if they so desire, play football of the best type. Because of this, sly kicking, elbow pushing and stilet demonstrations are nothing but childish actions, quite unworthy of the performers.

STERNER CONTROL NEEDED

It is obvious that much sterner control is called for if this type of football is going to continue. South China very naturally want to remain unbeaten in the league this year, lots of teams very naturally desire to have the distinction of being the first to beat them; keenness to win the Governor's Cup is understandable. But to accomplish these ends teams must play the game properly. If they are not prepared to then the Football Association have got to take a strong line of action. Marching orders are supposed to act as a severe corrective, but do they? Yesterday's dismissal of two players from the field made but little difference. The Association had three free kicks in the course of the next five minutes.

Questionable tactics may appeal to a section of the crowd which throng to local football matches, but the rules of the game are not founded on mob reactions. The good conduct of players is still an essential quality of football, and to preserve that, ruling authorities have to take sufficient action, no matter how strict it may appear to be.

CONTRACT
BRIDGESolution to Previous
Contract Problem

By W. E. McKenney

I hope you didn't try to work today's hand out by just taking a pencil and marking the cards off on the paper. If so, I'm afraid you found the hand more difficult than you expected.Harold Solof of Pittsburgh gave me this hand and said that it was dealt out in a regular rubber game at home, and after the hand was played he couldn't understand why six-odd hadn't been made. When he laid the hand out, he found he had a very fine double-dummy problem.

The Play

The opening lead was the six of diamonds, which East won with the ace. He returned a club. You might be able to defeat the contract by playing the first two tricks
some other way, but these first two plays are definitely set. From now on the hand must be made against the best possible defence.The second trick is won in dummy with the king of clubs. At this point take two rounds of hearts, winning the second round in dummy with the king. West discards a diamond and East a spade. Now lead the ace of clubs.
Would you discard a diamond or a small spade? If you do either, you lose your contract.The only way the hand can be made at this point is for South to discard the ten of spades.Now start the heart suit. Cash the ten, lead the seven, and overtake with the jack. East will discard a diamond and a spade and West a diamond and a club. Now the queen of hearts is played, West discarding the ten of clubs, dummy
the six of spades, East the seven of clubs.Next the six of hearts. West lets go a spade, dummy the seven of diamonds, and East the queen of spades. Now the five of hearts.
West lets go the three of spades
and dummy the eight of diamonds.Today's Contract Problem South is playing the contract at six trumps. West opens the five of clubs. What is the safest way to play the hand, and can you accurately read the cards so as to make the play that will give you your contract?

CARNEGIE MILLIONS

FAMOUS TRUST MAKES BIG GRANT IN BRITAIN

London, Mar. 10. The famous Carnegie Trust, which has distributed millions of pounds to social services throughout the world, has just made further grants totalling £405,000 for social and cultural purposes in the United Kingdom.

These grants were announced yesterday by Lt. Col. J. M. Munchell, Secretary of Carnegie (United Kingdom) Trust.

The new grants, which are for a period of five years from the beginning of 1936, include £150,000 for land settlement in distressed areas, which will be distributed in co-operation with the Land Settlement Association recently established on the initiative of the Ministry of Agriculture.

The Government has promised financial interest, and the Commissioner for Special Areas has undertaken the responsibility of developing work.

The remaining grants are for the extension of public libraries, museums, village halls and other social cultural purposes.

The objects of this Trust, which is similar to others founded throughout the United States and the British Empire by the late millionaire-owner of the Carnegie Corporation, is to promote the well-being of the masses of the people of Great Britain and Ireland by "charitable" methods. The Trustees are charged to concern themselves primarily with experiments of a pioneer nature. They operate in accordance with quinquennial programmes, and are at present (1921-35) assisting Municipal Libraries, and the National Central Library.

It was disclosed to-day that the British Trust, since it was founded in 1914 has distributed $2,628,000 in Great Britain and Ireland. Similar Carnegie trusts have distributed equally large amounts in the British Dominions and the United States.

The income of the British Trust is £122,200 per annum; that of the United States Trust U.S.$1,700,000. —British Wireless.

IF CHILD IS CROSS WON'T EAT

Take Doctor's Advice
Results Will Surprise You

If your precious child won't eat without coaxing, is nervous and underweight... do what doctors the world over advise: Give him a little Castoria and you will see a marked improvement the first day.

Authorities have found intestinal absorption of poisons to be the cause of most child ailments. Even when the child's habits may seem regular, poisons seep through the system and do damage. The stomach is upset. Foods do not digest properly. The nerves lose their delicate balance. Nothing can correct this insidious condition quite as easily and naturally as Castoria. It tastes so good children beg for it. And it swiftly purges the little system of poisons. It settles the stomach, improves digestion and restores nerve-poise. Then Nature does the rest as only Nature can. Appetite for food quickly returns. Health is restored to normal. And as a result the child gains weight fast and becomes sturdy and strong.

Now take care of your child this safe, drugless way. Get a bottle of Castoria and try it. Results will delight you.

WOODS TRAGEDY SEQUEL

MURDERER OF WAITRESS

HANGED AT LEEDS

David Maskill Blake (29) was hanged at Armley Jail, Leeds, at 9 o'clock of a recent morning for the murder of Emily Yeomans, a Leeds cafe waitress, by strangling her with her own scarf in Middleton Woods, on the outskirts of Leeds, on the night of October 10.

When Blake's appeal against the death sentence was dismissed by the Court of Criminal Appeal, Lord Hewart, the Lord Chief-Justice, described the murder as a cruel and treacherous one.

The trial at Leeds, before Mr. Justice Glynne, evoked extraordinary public interest because of the fact that the case rested so much on circumstantial evidence and highly scientific testimony relating to the nature of a strand of wool torn from Blake's clothing.

Miss Yeomans, who was 23 years of age, was seen to meet a man shortly after 7.30 on the night of the murder, and to walk with him in the direction of the Middleton Woods, where her body was found next morning. That same day, at the register office at Leeds, Blake married a waitress at another cafe by whom he had had a child. This woman, in the witness-box, swore that a box of powder found in Blake's room and said to have belonged to Miss Yeomans, was her property, but this evidence was negated by analytical chemists.

PREVIOUS OFFENCES

One of Blake's married sisters, Mrs. Florence Bousfield, made a last desperate effort to obtain a reprieve and personally presented a petition with 10,000 signatures at the Home Office. The Home Secretary, however, intimated that he saw no justification for intervening in the course of the law.

A farewell visit by his wife and his two sisters, Mrs. Bousfield, Leeds, and Mrs. Hodgkinson, of Castleford, was paid to Blake on the afternoon before the hanging. They stayed half-an-hour.

It may now be revealed that Blake was sentenced to three years' penal servitude at Leeds in March 1930 for a most brutal outrage upon a young domestic servant whom he had offered to escort home across some fields, as he said, for safety, when she had just missed her last bus from Castleford. The circumstances of the offence were so bad that Mr. Justice Charles, when passing sentence, said he would have undoubtedly made it one of five years but for Blake's comparative youth. He was then 25 years of age.

Blake, however, had previously been sentenced to two years' penal servitude, dismissed from the Army with ignominy, and expelled from India for an outrage upon a 70 years old native woman.

SERVICE AT PRISON ENTRANCE

A crowd of over 600 assembled outside the jail shortly before nine o'clock on the morning of Blake's death. Amongst them were several Salvation Army officers. Blake as a boy was at one time in the Salvation Army.

A Salvation Army officer in uniform distributed hymn sheets amongst the crowd and intimated that a little service of prayer would be held at nine o'clock.

The service opened with the singing of "Jesus, Lover of my soul," after which prayers were said. As the hour struck, most of the crowd bared their heads.

A sermon, lasting about five minutes was delivered and at the conclusion a man in the crowd shouted, "Thou shalt not kill." The service ended with the singing of the hymn, "Abide with me."

Among the crowd—almost hidden against a wall—were relatives of Blake. They included Mrs. Bousfield and Blake's brother-in-law, Mr. Pearson.

At 9.5 notices were posted out-

IMMORTALS' DISCOMFORT

DO NOT CARE FOR FIRE RISKS

Paris, Jan. 13.

The danger of the Forty Immortals of the French Academy benefiting by their immortality sooner than they had counted on has spread consternation among those venerable gentlemen the other morning.

They discovered that in the ancient Institute of France, where the gray-haired, uniformed academicians deliberate and ever so slowly pound out their dictionary, there was no means of fire prevention.

Perhaps the Institute was built too long ago; or perhaps its caretakers simply have counted on the immortality of the occupants. In any case there is not an extinguisher on the premises, and the immortals themselves, warned by the famous Paul Valery, are not interested in tests of fire.

The disturbing information imparted by Valery brought a lively debate among the elders of literature and art, who promptly called a plenary session to discuss fire extinguishers in detail. This session has just been held and led to the appointment of a special commission on the subject.

The commission, it is hoped, will solve the problem if it can find the money, and meanwhile has been instructed to draw up a report taking into account "the paucity of credits at the disposition of the Institute for its personal use."

DOCTOR'S ERROR

INFORMATION KEPT FROM PATIENT

NOMINAL DAMAGES

Judgment for five guineas against a doctor was given in the King's Bench Division, London, in the action in which the doctor was alleged, accidentally, to have left the broken needle of a hypodermic syringe in a woman's body.

The plaintiffs, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Gerber, of Upper Marylebone Street, London, brought an action for damages against Dr. Pines, of Philip Street, London, alleging that during a hypodermic injection on Mrs. Gerber, defendant left part of a needle in her back. Defendant denied negligence.

Mr. Norman Richards was briefed for plaintiffs and Mr. Henry Dickens for defendant.

Mr. Justice du Parcq said that as to some of the allegations of negligence, there was really no evidence. Unfortunately there was a good deal of dispute between plaintiffs and the doctor as to some incidents and conversations between them, but much of the case was common ground and he was not confronted with any great difficulty by the conflict of evidence.

His Lordship said it was quite clear that no negligence in the performance of the operation was proved against Dr. Pines. The injection was administered much as the previous ones were, though there might have been some difference in the posture of the patient.

It was suggested that the doctor did not use a suitable needle. Needles were all liable to break. They might break through careless handling, but there was no evidence that there had been any careless handling in this instance.

A needle might break because of an involuntary movement on the part of the patient. Mrs. Gerber was a very nervous woman, and Mr. Gerber was also anxious that she should not be told she was seriously ill. The doctor said he thought it was not wise in the circumstances to tell the patient the needle was in her body, but it seemed to his Lordship that as a general rule the patient in whose body a doctor finds that he has left some foreign substance was entitled to be told so at once.

LAYMAN'S VIEW

Speaking as a layman, he thought there was something to be said for the suggestion that it would have been wiser to have made the injection in the arm, but he could not possibly hold that it was negligent to make the injections in the body.

In His Lordship's view, it was most important that the doctor should have told either the patient or her husband, before she left the surgery that there was a risk that the needle might move from where it was.

Dr. Pines said, and he was justified in the result, that he thought the needle would remain fixed where it was in the muscle.

In the circumstances, His Lordship found that the doctor had not taken every reasonable step. The risk of telling the woman that the needle was in her body was not too great and he ought to have taken that risk instead of letting her go home with a piece of foreign substance in her body.

His Lordship held there had been a breach of duty on the part of the doctor, but that the medical expenses, the hospital charges and the engagement of a house seer did not flow from that breach. Apart from some small items, the only damages he could award were for pain and suffering during the two or three days before the revelation of the fact that the needle was in the plaintiff's body.

Mrs. Gerber was entitled to nominal damages, and he gave judgment for plaintiffs for five guineas but without costs.

SLEEP A GREAT HEALER

SUREST WAY TO HEALTH.

GUARDING
CHILD

By A SPECIALIST

SLEEP is the great physical and mental restorative of man; he cannot do without it. During sleep many things happen: the breathing becomes quiet and regular; physical and mental activity ceases, and the body and mind sink into a state of calm and quiet relaxation. The blood-pressure falls, and it is during sleep that the great repair to the tissues and cells of the brain and the body takes place.

A night of calm and undisturbed sleep and we awake refreshed and repaired: the lost vitality of the day before has been silently replaced in the great laboratory of Nature.

One is often asked for how long we ought to sleep. Regarding this no hard and fast lines can be laid down. It is said that Napoleon was able to go for days without sleep and then make up for it with a sleep of 24 hours' duration. Lord Haldane said, I believe, that he never slept for more than 3 hours. But these are the exceptions, and such people may do with short hours of sleep; but the average individual cannot, without physical and mental detriment.

NOT ENOUGH SLEEP

As to whether we sleep enough—generally speaking, I should say the answer is, No. There are any number of people who do not get, or take, enough sleep. With them getting up in the morning is a struggle and they awake unrefreshed.

This big freighter recently went aground outside Halifax, Canada. The captain, who stayed on board after all others had been rescued, was swept away by a huge wave just as the ship cracked in two beneath him.

This unusual picture shows a hunt, hounds and all, in the market place of Melton Mowbray, England, ready for the chase. Both hunters and hounds seem to be enjoying the exceptional setting for the start of the hunt.

ed; the necessary "repair" has not had time to be carried out.

This deficiency, carried out over a long period of time, runs the victim down and keeps him or her in a state of being ever below par.

The cause for this state—insufficient sleep—is rarely guessed at. But it is a most potent source—and so unsuspected. Occasional late nights do no harm; it is the regular nightly shortage that in time must and does tell. It results in fatigue by day, in disinclination for work, and often in irritability and depression. Too, it produces inefficient work.

Innumerable people make the day too long and as a result never feel fit. I find one of my most successful prescriptions is, "Go to bed an hour earlier." It rarely fails to bring benefit to the health and an increase in general fitness, together with greater capacity for, and better, work.

In the case of children—the matter is infinitely more important. It is lamentable to see young children dragged about, often half asleep, quite late at night. It should be made criminal; it is asking for disaster. For these young children become quickly devilized that way and then, through lowered resistance, fall an easy prey to childish illnesses, such as the dangerous measles. Every mother who does this gravely wrongs her child—perhaps quite intentionally.

MAXIMUM OF SLEEP

Infants—and puppies and kittens and all baby animals—require the maximum of sleep; here Nature sees to this. Children of from four to seven require twelve hours of sleep, and from eight to twelve ten hours as a minimum; older children require nearly as much. A child who has insufficient sleep cannot, and does not, do its school work as efficiently as the child who has thoroughly slept.

In the child nothing can ever take the place of adequate hours of sleep; many parents fail to realize this.

How much sleep then, does the adult require? Generally speaking, I should say, eight hours. There are, of course, exceptions to this; some may do satisfactorily on six or seven; some may require even ten. As people get old they generally require less. But, though they may do with fewer hours of actual sleep, it is imperative that they should have longer hours of rest in bed.

For those who have leisure to indulge in it, an afternoon nap is often very beneficial. It is particularly valuable to the elderly, and in cases of neurasthenia.

OVER-TIREDNESS

The nervously exhausted will always sleep better at night if they have had a short nap in the afternoon. Many people sleep badly at night because they have gone to bed overtired; this may often be avoided if time can be found for sleep earlier in the day.

Active brain workers require longer sleep than those whose work does not lie this way; in them the wear and tear and the nervous energy spent is greater by far, and the repair required is greater also.

Many late nights on end—except for the fortunate few who can stop in bed till midday—must prove injurious in the long run. Apart from interfering with the work of the day, it tends to slow but steady exhaustion of the nervous system. Many cases of "nerves" can be directly attributed to this habit.

No great golfer, tennis player, or expert in any other sport ever dreams of anything but a long night's sleep before a big event. Hand and eye must be steady and fit and in harmony and conjunction; and this cannot be after a night of little sleep.

MISERABLE MORNINGS

If one wakes up in the morning fit and fresh, and with the feeling of having thoroughly slept, the amount of sleep has doubtless been adequate. But how many of this? The first hour or two in the morning is a misery to many people; for the simple reason that they have not had sufficient sleep.

There is probably a good deal of truth in the old maxim that an hour before midnight is worth two after. For those who get insufficient sleep during the working week, the best restorative is to spend Sunday morning in bed—and asleep.

Do some people sleep too much? A few do. Those who are lethargic and obese are the ones inclined this way. The long hours of sleep with this minority tend to the putting on of more weight; with greater weight comes more lethargy; and with more lethargy the desire for increasing hours of sleep.

A vicious circle is produced. Those of this type are often the victims of unsuspected indifferent health. They are the "self-poisoned" individuals whose auto-intoxication makes them unduly heavy and lethargic. They are mostly sedentary and eat too much. Let them cut down their intake and take regular exercise and the call for unduly long hours of sleep will pass away.

Very few people are really born lazy. They are mostly the victims of the unsuspected indifferent health I have mentioned. Mind and body are clogged with their own unburned-up waste products.

Elimination of these by the correction of faulty habits will replace the engendered physical and mental sluggishness with an alertness previously unknown.

The Duke of Marlborough (son of the former Consuela Vanderbilt), his wife, the Duchess, and their children, Lady Caroline, Lady Sarah and the Marquis of Blandford, are seen here arriving in New York from their home in England. The Duke succeeded to the title only last year. The dukedom was created in 1702.

The Japanese freighter Hokkaido Maru sinking in the midst of a wild storm on the North Pacific was in desperate need of assistance when the President Jackson came alongside. All her crew was rescued.

Guy Cheng's Driving IMPRESSES AT C. R. C.

IMPRESSES AT C. R. C.

CHENG LEARNS SOMETHING

But subsequently Taul lost his touch and could do nothing right. He broke through Cheng's service early on in the second set to lead two-love, but thereafter the Davis Cup player was right on top, driving brilliantly to all parts of the courts and running Taul off his feet.

Stilles were sharp and short, and the whole match was over in less than an hour. It was good entertainment, with Cheng satisfying one as to his improvement. The recent Manila trip obviously did him a lot of good, and from what I have been told Cheng received several helpful tips from Moore, the Australian ace. Hongkong will watch Cheng's experiences and fortunes in America with much interest.

The match was efficiently umpired by Paul Kong, and both players received an ovation from a fair sized crowd.

Lanes: Price (R.A.); Horner (East Lancs.); Eckersley (East Lancs.); Duffield (R.A.O.C.); Talbot (Fusiliers); and Griffen (East Lancs.).

The Recreio should have persisted in this type of game instead of losing their heads after the interval. It suited the Chinese admirably to find their bodily discomfort more important to the Recreio than the ball. It allowed them to regather their scattered forces and to make an all-round improvement. The now-disjointed Portuguese raids were confidently repulsed by Li Tin-sang and his colleagues while Tam Kong-pak had more of the ball and made fairly good use of it.

Although it was Fung King-cheung's wonderful shot which gave the Chinese the deciding goal, Tam was the real menace to the Recreio defence. Too Kwai-shing was too much of a fourth half back to be of use in the attack and Wong Mee-shun was useless on the left wing. This, plus the absence of Ip Pak-wa for three parts of the game left Tam and Fung on their own. It speaks volumes for the second half decline of the Recreio intermediates that these two players were able to win the game.

LEUNG SHINES IN DEFENCE. That Leung In-chai, Leung Wing-chai and Lau Hing-choi improved out of all knowledge after an uncomfortable first half was manifest in the

ADAMSON CUP

RESULT OF FIRST ROUND DRAW

B. W. Bradbury with a card of 91-23-68 and T. C. Fairburn returning 87-19-68 tied and qualified for the March qualifying round of the Adamson Cup at Happy Valley.

The first round draw for the match play stages of the competition has resulted as follows: A. Macfarlane v. T. D. Paton; L. R. Billingham v. C. L. Tatham; T. C. Fairburn v. B. W. Bradbury; D. S. Edward v. E. H. Watts; W. Woodward v. F. J. de Rome; J. W. Frank v. H. T. Brooks; C. W. E. Bishop v. A. E. Clark; R. Clark v. W. L. Alexander.

The first named player must fix the date of his match on or before March 31.

parallel collapse of the Recreio forwards. Leung Wing-chai was very fine in defence and finally had B. Gosano under his thumb. Leung In-chai remained steady right through, but Lau did not find form until late in the game.

Lau Mau had a bad day, and Li Tin-sang saved the Chinese from being completely overrun in the first half. But as a pair of backs they only inspired confidence in the last quarter of an hour.

Tung Yai-ming had a surprisingly small amount of work to do in view of the trend of the game. He performed quite well, although he should never have conceded the goal he did. He had the choice of doing the right or wrong thing. He chose the latter, caught the ball instead of punching it, and the next minute found himself in the net.

SPLENDID LEADERSHIP

The Recreio's four fine chances in the first half to which allusion has already been made were culminating points of exceptionally clever movements which started round about the halfway line. B. Gosano figured prominently in each of them and it is a long time since I have seen better forward line leadership.

South China did not remain very long in arrears. A sudden attack down the right wing found the ball in the Recreio goalmouth. It was half cleared to Wong Mee-shun who lobbed the ball back and A. V. Gosano attempted to kick half-volley, but missed completely. As always, Fung King-cheung was right on the spot, and that made it one-all.

Persistent fouling ruined the second half football. B. Gosano, Delgado, Lau Hing-choi, Leung Wing-chai, Bowen, Wong Mee-shun and Fung King-cheung in turn forgot about the ball and went for the man. It was not to be wondered that goals looked as unlikely as a heat-wave in Iceland.

Then, again unexpectedly, came South China's second and deciding goal. Wong Mee-shun neatly tricked Silva-Netto and when tackled by Gosano crossed the ball to Fung King-cheung who was standing just inside the penalty area. Without hesitation the sharp-shooter hit the ball and found the corner of the net, Marques being at least a second too late in his dive.

The Recreio tried desperately hard in the last few minutes. A. V. Gosano moved up to the attack, but the gods, who had already been cold-shouldered, were not disposed to offer new opportunities and the Recreio attacks petered out against an eight-men defence.

A PEACH-BLOOM SKIN

in spite of exposure is yours if you guard it this way.

Pond's Cold Cream cleanses immaculately. Pond's Vanishing Cream protects and is a perfect powder base.

A peach-bloom skin . . . dewy fresh velvety soft . . . invitingly cool exquisitely clear and fine of texture . . . youthfully smooth, firm, supple . . . this is the gift Pond's brings to you!

You know that your skin must be especially guarded in hot countries;
scorching sun and drying dust are dangerous to beauty. Yet you can golf, ride, travel; happy in the satisfaction of knowing your skin will not suffer from the effects of exposure if you give it this special care.

For you need not have a dried out, coarsened complexion with Pond's Two famous Creams to aid you.

So, to give your skin the scrupulous attention it needs in a trying climate,
follow this way regularly:

Spread Pond's Cold Cream generously over face and neck. Smooth in with gentle upward, outward strokes. The fine oils search out dirt from the roots of the pores, and soothe that taut feeling after exposure. Wipe off Cream and dirt. Apply more Cream. Remove.
Now your skin is thoroughly cleansed
and refreshed.

Always do this at bedtime, and leave on a little Cream overnight to keep the skin supple and restore the natural oils
dried out by sun and wind.

After each daytime cleansing, apply a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream to soothe,
protect, and for a powder base. Don't forget to rub some into your hands!

Follow the Pond's way faithfully, and peach-bloom skin is yours.

THE PACIFIC NAVAL SITUATION

In the discussions which have been provoked by Japan's denunciation of the Washington Naval Treaty, the fear has been expressed in some quarters that the inevitable tendency will be to cause an armaments race, which, in the long run, may result in actual war. Arguing from the standpoint that when the treaty was drawn up in 1921 it averted the prospects of hostilities, it is now contended by certain observers that, with Japan freed from treaty restrictions, the once-averted war may become a future certainty. Such a fear is easily understandable when it is borne in mind that the treaty was devised for the express purpose of ending a naval race which had become both expensive and dangerous. Nevertheless, calm consideration will show that the outlook today is by no means as perilous as might be supposed. A saving factor in the situation is to be discovered in a simple bit of geography. The three great naval Powers—Britain, the United States and Japan—are separated one from another by thousands of miles of sea. This, fortunately, means that any one of these nations can build a fleet which will provide national security for itself without necessarily menacing the national security of the other two. That was not the case in Europe during the period prior to the Great War, when there was unrestrained competition in naval armaments. That competition involved two nations which were geographically close together—Britain and Germany—and it was inevitable that if Germany were to have a fleet strong enough to keep open her sea lanes to the outer seas, it had to be strong enough to dispute with Britain the control of the waters vital to British safety. The reverse was also true: a British fleet strong enough to make England secure was automatically strong enough to cut Germany off from the rest of the world. Neither nation could therefore attain naval security without at the same time raising a direct menace to the security of the other. Feverish naval building resulted, and although this of itself was not the actual cause of the war, it was a circumstance which tended to increase tension rather than otherwise. The present situation, as between Britain, the United States and Japan, is vastly different. The United States fleet, for example, might be strong enough to keep the sea lanes open and to protect America's coasts, and yet be still too weak and diffused for large-scale manoeuvres aimed at either Japan or Britain. The same observation can be applied to the British and Japanese navies. This circumstance needs keeping in mind at the present time. Admittedly, it takes no account of the political aspect of the situation as between the three countries most vitally concerned with the Pacific situation, but it is, none the less, a factor which may well have an important influence on future developments.

NOTES OF THE DAY

GAS ATTACKS

In some foreign countries, notably Germany, certain measures have been taken to protect the people from gas attacks and to train them in methods of treatment. But at the best these measures can do little. How is it possible to ensure the safety of scores of millions of persons, who may be attacked suddenly from any quarter? In Britain practically nothing has been done, and though there is much talk now and then, the populace go about their daily work without giving much thought to the matter, and maybe they are right. At all events they cannot make much of the few vague hints that are given from time to time. A technical journal, for example, suggests gas-proof rooms, to be occupied till the "all clear" signal is given. But how are forty millions to be provided with such refuges? Another instruction given in the same journal seems to be almost as impracticable. Mustard gas needs some time to take effect. Therefore, the skin should be immediately scrubbed with soap and hot water, for not less than five minutes, changing the water frequently. The eyes, being peculiarly susceptible, should be washed with warm water and bicarbonate of soda or a weak solution of salt. If a gas is used which irritates the lungs oxygen would have to be administered, or a stimulant injected hypodermically. Interesting, but oxygen and hypodermic instruments are not to be found in every street, nor even hot water and soap. It would seem that we should just have to "thole" what came to us.

NEW FASHION-MAKER

A movement is afoot in Germany to make women dress "Nordically." They are to free themselves of all foreign influence and to attire themselves according to certain principles which are supposed to be fundamentally racial. It is not easy to get a clear view of these principles, but they have a strong flavour of the familiar saying that women's attention should be given mainly to three things—Church, children, and cooking. A woman's attire should be adapted to practical purposes. She is not to aim at being the "youthful beloved," for after these things do the alien races seek. She must have as her ideal the "motherly woman." Dress must not be for "showing off." It must be subservient and helpful to the development of the body. In a word, the German woman must make the body beautiful and not trust to clothing to that end. To neglect that principle is to incur physical and spiritual injury, which must lead to national disruption and racial disintegration, and race decides whether woman is a free being or a plaything. It is doubtful if women—even German women—will be able to order their lives on these exalted ideals. Woman is woman all the world over, and she is not likely to shed her femininity at the command of men who are in power today and to-morrow may count for nothing in the face of the nation.

NEW FASHION IN SKIRTS

A few weeks ago it was stated, with due reserve, that the hobble skirt is to be the next whim of fashion. Our elders will remember the short reign of that fantastic fashion, when women wore dresses so tight that they could scarcely walk. If they tried to run they had to "loup" like kangaroos. The latest news is that the hobble is actually to be worn, but only in the day-time. Women are to be permitted a natural walk in the evening. The dressmakers—they who must be obeyed—have decreed that the day-time skirt shall be a yard or less round the hem, and the general effect will be a "penet." The straight and narrow effect will be emphasised by coats gathered at the waist and spread bell-shape over the skirt. In the evening a more than generous fullness will be allowed. Some of the new evening gowns will be six yards round the hem, and will be very full from the hips. This will be a relief from the present mode of constriction at the knees. In a word, women will be "loupers" during the day and striders at night.

NELSON WOULD BE AN AIRMAN

BY CAPT. NORMAN MACMILLAN

Capt. Macmillan in January 1918, was awarded the Military Cross for shooting down three enemy aeroplanes and driving down six others out of control. In 1919 he received the Air Force Cross in recognition of his War services with the Highland Light Infantry, the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Air Force.

THE rise and fall of nations rests upon the mutability of mankind. Every so often, time throws out some genius who grasps the spirit of the times.

If Nelson, the man who made England mistress of the seas, were alive to-day he would be an airman, and our people might then have some reason to sleep peacefully.

In 1768, when Nelson was born, the supremacy of England on the sea was not established. The French and Spanish Fleets were stronger than our own, both in numbers and in size of ships.

The boy Nelson possessed a spirit, one filled with the love of adventure. The mobility of the ship was then supreme; it was England's great fighting weapon. The call of the sea rang in his heart and at the age of 12 he sought his work in the Royal Navy.

He quickly proved a born sailor. Expert in seamanship and pilotage he had a natural aptitude for command. He was a post-captain at the age of 21.

The French Revolution brought England to war with France in 1793. Five years later Nelson, an admiral, 39 years of age, engaged the French Fleet in the Battle of the Nile and all but destroyed it. That victory marked the ascendancy of the British Navy. It foiled Napoleon's plans for invading England. At the Battle of Copenhagen in 1801 and Trafalgar in 1805 Nelson broke the power of Napoleon upon the sea.

There is a parallel in the Europe of to-day. Armed forces of the air—superior in strength to those of England—stand landed in Continental countries. We need fear no invasion through might upon the waters. By air alone can the old threat upon the security of England be revived. At this present, vital moment that threat exists.

No genius, seeing how things stand, would ever dream of entering a Service other than the air.

The commander who would sweep havoc into the potential enemy of England must lead our fleet of aeroplanes. "The sea is England's glory" should be written in past tense. To-day, we ought to blazon in the skies, "The air is England's glory." If only that were so!

Nelson never achieved his victories by chance. In his personality he had everything on his side—youth, courage, skill in seamanship and pilotage, leadership that never hesitated to throw his own person at the enemy at the head of his men. Exultant was his cry "Westminster Abbey or Victory!"

Nelson learned his art of sea-war in battle. About the coasts of Europe, the West Indies, and of South America he demonstrated his courage and skill, and gained promotion.

We need a Nelson in the air. What have we got to show the world that we have such a man, the equivalent of a rear-admiral at 38, victorious in battle, and an acknowledged leader of men?

During the war there were approximately 130 pilots who shot down 10 or more enemy aircraft. Of these, 19 are still on the active list of the Royal Air Force. Of these 19 one is a Group Captain, 7 are Wing Commanders, 8 are Squadron Leaders, and 3 are still Flight Lieutenants. There is not one with Air Command rank.

The five senior officers of the Royal Air Force range in age this year from 49 to 58. Only one is under 50. The next ten senior officers are aged from 45 to 64 to-day. We have not a single Air Commodore (the fourth rank on the active list) below the age of 42; the oldest is almost 60.

I do not know of one officer in these four senior ranks who shot down 10 aeroplanes during the war.

General Goring, Germany's Air Minister, supreme commander of his country's air effort, was a fighting airman. He took command of the famous Richthofen squadron when that redoubtable leader of men fell to the earth. He has the Ordre pour le Merite, the German equivalent of the Victoria Cross, and his war record is a tale of 32 enemy aeroplanes shot down.

The air is to the England of to-day what the sea was in Nelson's time. But with this vital difference—there will be no time for preparation against attack. Aircraft are too swift. The 10-knot sailing ship has become a 250-knot-an-hour aeroplane. The Nelson of to-day must cram one day of Nelson's work into a single hour. No time for aught but instant action—action built on practice, not on precept.

Nelson led his men in person. Leadership in war means everything to those who follow. One brave man can stimulate the whole to the will to win.

When the great formations rise from their war-dromes into the sighing winds, and surge through the invisible air towards their objectives, bearing the fate-of-our-Empire on their laden wings—when that time comes, shall we have a Nelson in the van to lead our fleet to victory? Then give our youth the rank of leadership.

I would like to see our Air Force led through the skies as Marshal Balbo led his squadrons from Italy to Chicago and back to Rome. That means youth. In the wind-swept skies youth is all-conquering, triumphant. In the flexibility of sinew, the rapid response of muscle, the keenness of young sight, the practised hand and the feel of flight, there is the rhythm of victory. The leadership of youth will decide the future of the air.

Hollywood, Calif.

Dear Alice White:

I have seen you in every picture you have ever made and I must say that I have gradually fallen in love with you. After due thought, I want to ask you to announce our engagement. Please see that it goes to the papers next week, and I will watch the newspapers here. Even though we can never be married, I still feel that I would like to be engaged to you. I know you will grant me this wish, as I have been a fan of yours for so long.

I have no bad habits, unless you would call snoring one.

Why We Should Go To War

There is not only danger of war in foreign commitments, but in every contact between nations.

War between England and Australia was only just averted by leaving Jardine and Larwood out of the Test team. Now comes a warning from a Mr. Scheine, lawyer to Tex Austin and "Councillor" to the Rodco.

When Mr. Scheine heard that the Rodco was not a success in England he said gravely:—

"I am very much concerned about this. There is danger of growing animosity between the two countries which should be on terms of closer friendship."

By the same argument we shall go to war with the United States the next time an American play is a flop in London.

To-day's Centenary

March 11, 1935—Death of Lady Jane Walpole.

Gallant old Jane Walpole! They don't breed her like to-day. (You'll find her life in "Old Hongkong" I think the second volume). She was Master of the Vanchai Hunt, the first woman to fill that role. She weighed fifteen stone in her riding-boots (there's a pair of 'em still, in the county museum at Biggleswade); she rode astride, with a brandy-flask in each of her saddle-bags; she mopped up claret at her hunt-breakfasts as you or I, Gertie, might mop up tea. A great character; and a great lover of horses.

When she died she bequeathed to her stallion, Pindar, a pension of eighteen guineas a year. He survived until 1841, and the entire Hunt, in pink, was at his funeral. Little poor old Pindar cared.

Highbrows' Corner

"Popular beliefs are always wrong," said Lord Raglan at the British Association.

This raises a point of great interest to us thinking chaps. The belief that popular beliefs are always wrong is itself a popular belief.

What does His Nibs say to that? Now take a look at our use of "we" in the phrase "we thinking chaps."

A lot of you lads will be writing to us and saying our grammar is all wrong. We are told so quite often, by Headmasters and all sorts of important people. Well, we use "we" here deliberately, for literary and technical reasons. It's an instance of deferred prolepsis.

"Mr. Baxford is in a grand humour. Why wouldn't this be a good time to approach him about that job?"

BARRIER TO TRADE
RECOVERYPRICE LEVELS
UNBALANCEDCANADIAN BANK
"SOLUTION"

Montreal, March 10.—Normal world trade cannot be restored until parity between price levels has been achieved, the Royal Bank of Canada says in its monthly letter here. The letter points out that the most reasonable means of maintaining permanent exchange stability would be the revaluation of gold currencies on a basis approximating the recent changes in the value of gold in the United States.

One of the most important factors contributing to delayed recovery, "and incidentally to social and political unrest in Europe," is the deepening depression in the gold bloc countries, and price levels in the United States and the countries which have abandoned the gold standard.

"Trade can only be resumed on a normal basis when these price levels come together," the letter says.

REVALUATION NEEDED

"This cannot occur without further drastic deflation in the gold countries, or as the result of a great improvement in the volume of business and prices in the United States and the non-gold countries, or a combination of both; or finally, as the result of the revaluation of the gold in the United States. Deflation in the gold countries is proceeding so slowly that revaluation seems the most practical alternative. With revaluation accomplished, permanent exchange stability could be maintained.

"It would be a long step in this direction if the United States could definitely state that there would be no further change in the value of the gold dollar. A statement of this nature would tend to bring about a flow of gold toward the United States, both because of return of home capital from abroad and because of the fear on the part of foreigners that some of the gold countries would not longer be able to maintain their present somewhat precarious position. Without a statement from the United States, however, European countries, including the sterling bloc, are naturally hesitant to discuss exchange stabilization, although there is a general agreement that the question is of profound importance to the world.

"Gold supplies of most countries are larger than they were in 1913 and 1929, and are adequate to permit a restoration of the gold standard, the letter said.

With stabilization on the basis suggested (a 70 per cent. increase in the value of gold), danger of hoarding would have passed and freedom of movement of gold in all the important countries except Germany could be restored.—United Press.

WHAT IS FATE OF DOLLAR?

New York, Mar. 10. Members of the New York Stock Exchange to-day pointed out that

INFLATION
GROWINGU.S. MAY AGAIN
DEVALUENEW DEAL'S
STRUGGLE

Washington, March 9. Inflation sentiment is gaining in Congress. The weakness of commodities and sterling, coupled with Congressional threats of wild inflationary legislation, may cause the President to devalue the dollar to fifty cents as a compromise.

No evidence exists of a British-American currency agreement. Prospects for all legislation are uncertain as a result of growing opposition to the New Deal.

Moderate regulation of holding companies and utilities is likely without the abolition of holding companies.

Railroad and coal miners strikes are likely in the Spring. More than a seasonal decline in business between now and mid-summer is expected.

The continued drought is causing renewed anxieties for next summer.—Swan, Culbertson and Fritz.

INFLATION PROSPECTS

Washington, Mar. 10. The Treasury has announced that it intends to use a portion of the gold seizure profits to retire $674,625,630 of the national debt. The debt will be discharged through gold certificates, which is regarded as being potentially inflationary.

After August 1, 1935, the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank will have the sole power to issue currency, the national bank currency being replaced by a Federal Reserve note issue with a forty per cent. gold note backing. Instead of the present national bank notes, which are backed by 100 per cent. bonds.

It is a note of note that the Federal Reserve has the power to issue $1,687,500,000 in forty per cent. notes for gold certificates if the Government so decides.—United Press.

PERJURY CHARGE

Clinton, N.J., March 10. The office of the State Prosecutor here has announced that one of the witnesses in the Hauptmann case must face the Grand Jury on a charge of perjury.

The authorities would disclose no details of the case, nor the name of the witness involved.—United Press.

the problem of recovery might be solved—for businessmen, market operators and bankers, if they could get a satisfactory answer to the question, "What is going to become of the dollar?"

They pointed out that if the answer meant degradation of the dollar, there would be no recovery, except for speculators, who always profit at wild inflation.

However, if some way could be found to tell accurately where the dollar was going to be next year, much could be done to restore the confidence necessary to re-open the capital market.—United Press.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

MANKIND, IN THE GROSS, IS A GAPING MONSTER, THAT LOVES TO BE DECEIVED, AND HAS SELDOM BEEN DISAPPOINTED.—Mackenzie.

The Empress of Britain, now on a world cruise, arrived at Batavia yesterday, and is due in Hongkong at 6 a.m. on March 23.

When he appeared before Mr. A. W. G. H. Grantham at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, Mok Shing was fined $5, or seven days' hard labour, by Mr. Grantham, for trespassing in the Shamshuipo Military Camp. Detective Sub-Inspector Poyntz stated that defendant went into the football ground with several other men, and when they were chased off, they threw stones at the soldiers.

While sacks of vegetables were being unloaded at the Ping On Wharf, a Chinese was seen to rip open one of the sacks and run off with three pieces of preserved vegetables. He was chased and caught in Des Voeux Road Central. The man, Wong Kwong, 23, coolie, was charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning and sent to prison for one month with hard labour. Sergeant Smith prosecuted.

The Hongkong Stock Exchange has received a cable from Messrs. Derrick & Co., local Secretaries in Singapore of the Raub Australian Gold Mining Co. Ltd., as follows: "The Raub Board of Directors have decided accede suggestion made by General Manager J. C. Goldham and have taken steps to secure the services of reliable Mining Engineer to proceed to mine and issue to directors an independent report."

One case each of Diphtheria, Typhoid Fever, and Meningitis, were reported to the local Health authorities on Friday.

At to-morrow's meeting of the Rotary Club the speaker will be Mr. H. C. Macnamara, and his subject "Law and its Prophets."

A mah jong set stolen from No. 43, Aberdeen Street resulted in an unemployed man, Lau Piu, 38, being sent to prison for six weeks by Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Magistracy this morning. Sub-Inspector O'Connor stated that defendant was in the habit of visiting complainant's husband. He was arrested in Wing Lok Street carrying the set.

Brought before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court this morning charged with the theft of a woollen jersey from the San Nga Haberdashery shop, Chan Chai, 40, unemployed man, was sent to prison for six weeks on pleading guilty. Similar sentence was also meted out to Ho King 38, for stealing a woollen jersey from No. 3 Jubilee Street, where he lived.

Mok Man, aged 26, a coppermith, was brought before Mr. Grantham at Kowloon Magistracy this morning, charged with the larceny by servant of two ingots of phosphor bronze from the Kowloon-Canton Railway work shop at Hunghom, on Saturday. Sergeant Nolan stated that defendant was sent trying to dispose of the stolen property about 2 p.m. on Saturday. The defendant had been employed at the railway workshop for the four years and received $140 a day. The stolen property was valued at $160. Sentence of two months' hard labour was passed.

BRITAIN AND U.S.
TO AID CHINAWill Act Alone If Necessary

London, March 10. The opinion has been expressed here to-day, that if Japan does not join in the international action for financial aid to China, Great Britain and the United States may jointly grant the loan.

Meanwhile, in Washington, observers predict an investigation to determine how poor China really is. Shanghai vernacular papers are opposing a foreign loan to China, saying it is unnecessary.—United Press.

"ASIA" LITIGATION

charters of the Apocry of Hongkong, claimed compensation for salvage services rendered to the Asia on January 13 and 14 at the same position.

MASTER'S EVIDENCE

Capt. William Lee, master of the Shun Chih, said that on January 13 he received instructions from Mr. Lee Koon-chun, managing director of the Wo Fat Shing, Ltd., managers of the ship, to proceed to the Asia's assistance. He sailed the same day with a full complement and sighted the Asia the following morning at eight o'clock, with the Apocry standing a few miles away. The Asia had a list of 20 degrees to port. He sent the Chief Officer, Mr. Blackwell, on board with a party and at 1.15 p.m. began towing her towards Hongkong. The Apocry having steamed off after leaving the Shun Chih a towing rope. There was nobody on board the Asia; no papers, no anchors and only part of the engines.

During the return voyage they ran into thick fog and a moderate gale, and going was made more difficult by reason of the Asia being about twice the size of the Shun Chih. There was a strong set towards Gap Rock which they only managed to clear by three quarters of a mile. At times the ship was stationary and at others they were making only three or four knots. They arrived in harbour about 7.30 on the morning of January 15 and the Asia was then handed over to three launches which manœuvred her to a buoy.

The tonnage and length of the Shun Chih and the Asia were respectively 1,173 and 2,240 tons, and 266 and 395 feet. Neither witness nor his men had any sleep on the trip, as it was very rough, and after all hands had been engaged in fixing the towing machinery, they had to stand by to slip the tow rope if it became necessary to do so. The ship had only just returned from a foggy journey from Swatow, during which they had little rest, when they were ordered to pick up the derelict.

HAZARDOUS TRIP

The salvage trip was 200 miles in extent and was rendered hazardous by the weather. The officers had been told that they would be probably called to something personally for their work, but they had preferred to leave the matter in the hands of Mr. Lee Koon-chun rather than become parties to the action.

In reply to Mr. D'Almada, witness said the Apocry was owned by the Wo Fat Shing. The Asia's starboard ladder was down when they got there, but it was broken. Questioned by Mr. Jenkins, witness agreed there were tugs available for such salvage operations.

Witness was later recalled to testify that a steel towing rope was bought for $477 for the salvage of the derelict.

Mr. Lee Koon-chun, giving evidence, said he received a wireless from the Apocry that she had sighted the Asia and that a tug would be desirable to bring her in. Witness wirelessed the Apocry to stand by and despatched the Shun Chih. The Shun Chih had on board a cargo valued at $20,000 whilst the ship herself was valued at $250,000. She was five days behind her schedule for Swatow and another ship had had to replace her on the run.

Witness agreed that the Apocry was chartered for $9,500 a month and, by agreement, profits from such salvage operations as this were to be divided between the owners and the charterers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jenkins, witness agreed that he could have obtained a tug but "sometimes they charge enormous prices" and there would have been nobody to pay for the tug if the salvage had been unsuccessful. Witness would have had to make a deposit, and he did not wish to take the risk. Witness said the insurance company had asked for and obtained an additional premium of $600 for going out on the salvage trip.

The hearing was adjourned to this afternoon.

FIERCE
GERMAN
FIGHTERSCHMELING BEATS
STEVE HAMASHUNTS LOST WORLD TITLE

Hamburg, March 10. The next challenger for the World's Heavyweight Boxing Championship will probably come from Germany, in the person of the former champion, burly Max Schmeling. To-night, before 20,000 wildly cheering fight fans, Schmeling shattered the hopes of Steve Hamas, American aspirant for the challenger's rights, and thereby established himself first favourite.

The American lost on a technical knock-out, and was so battered at the end of the ninth round that the referee stopped the fight.

Schmeling outpointed Hamas in every round except the fifth. He floored Big Steve for a count of eight in the sixth with a terrific right to the jaw.

The German ex-champion maintained a two-fisted attack from the outset, and in the final round, having cut Hamas to ribbons, he knocked him down twice for the count of nine. In every round Hamas was punished severely. He was completely outclassed.

Finally, covered with blood, cut badly under the eye, his mouth and nose bleeding profusely, he staggered about the ring. The referee intervened and saved him further battering.—Reuter.

Schmeling lost his title to Jack Sharkey in 1933, and Sharkey lost the championship shortly afterwards when the Man Mountain, Carnera, met him. Carnera was beaten by Max Baer, the Californian, last year, and Baer has not yet defended his title against an opponent who was given more than an off chance. Schmeling, boxing circles believe, is the logical challenger for Baer's crown though Baer defeated him in a non-title fight some time ago.

TWO PLAYERS SENT OFF IN AMAZING SOCCER GAME

RECREIO DEFEATED BY "TEMPERAMENT"

FOUR GOALS MISSED IN THE FIRST HALF AGAINST S. CHINA

LEAGUE LEADERS RETAIN RECORD

(By "Veritas")

Recreio ..... 1 S. China "A" ..... 2
 Recreio:—E. Marques; A. V. Gosano and Bowen; Silva-Netto, Boltrao and V. Marques; D'Almeida, Delgado, B. Gosano, Gomes, and Alves.
 S. China "A":—Tang Yat-ming; Li Tin-sang and Lau Mau; Leung In-chen, Leung Wing-chui and Lau Hing-choi; Tso Kwai-shing, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheung, Ip Pak-wa and Wong Mee-shun.

The so-called "big match temperament" plays just as important a part in football matches as in other forms of sport; certainly it had a tremendous influence on this game at the Railway Ground on Saturday and was largely responsible for a result which went against the run of play.

Three times within the first twenty minutes the ball was smashed against South China's cross-bar from less than ten yards range and each shot reflected over-eagerness by the shooter. First Borne. Gosano broke right through and with only Tang to beat shot a little wildly and struck the framework. Three minutes later Delgado followed suit and almost immediately afterwards Gomes repeated the trick. Then Delgado missed a glorious opportunity by fumbling the ball when unmarked within the goal area before Gosano's high part shot, part centre, was followed up by Gomes who handled Tang and the ball over the goal-line.

SHOULD HAVE BEEN FIVE

After half an hour's play the Recreio were one goal up, and they should have been five. Before the interval even this slender lead was lost when A. V. Gosano mis-kicked in front of goal and Fung King-cheung had nothing to do but to slam the ball past Marques.

South China were lucky to get away with the points, because at no time did they play like a championship team. Rarely before this season has the defence been so completely outwitted as in the initial stages of the match. Gosano, Delgado and Gomes walked round the half backs and left Li and Lau spread-eagled.

Gosano marmozed the opposition so completely that he continually drew them all out of position before making an adroit pass to a colleague. It only needed ordinary steadiness in shooting to leave South China hopelessly trailing. But that steadiness was not forthcoming, and the Chinese, making full use of their only opportunities, scored twice and won the game.

TOO MUCH BAD TEMPER

Had the play maintained the high standard reached in the first twenty minutes this would have been one of the most entertaining matches of the season. But weak refereeing which permitted players to get away with blatant fouls, and encouraged them to persevere in such tactics, helped the exchanges to degenerate into a display of man-hunting in the course of which the ball became but a secondary consideration.

There were lots of highly regrettable incidents which demanded a firm line of action by the official. Unhappily this was not taken and in the end personal feeling was running very high. True Delgado had his name taken for as deliberate a foul ever seen on local grounds, but Wong Mee-shun, Tso Kwai-shing and Leung Wing-chui were allowed to get away with equally as dangerous forms of tackling. It was pure war and quite inexcusable. Until the Chinese netted the equaliser the Recreio played splendid football. They not only monopolised the game, but set a pace and a standard of play which had the Chinese guessing. The swift tackling of A. V. Gosano and Bowen quickly broke up South China's attempts to assume the offensive, while the excellent constructive labours of Deltrao, Silva-Netto and Marques paved the way for a series of brilliant attacks by the vanguard.

SKILFUL MANOEUVRES

Gosano's skilful manoeuvres which had the effect of drawing Li Tin-sang and Lau Mau away from the front of the goal constantly placed Tang, Ming-yat and his change in jeopardy. The four lucky escapes which they had already been told.

CHINESE WIN BRAWL BY A DISPUTED GOAL

FLARING TEMPERERS AND MANY THRILLS

THE BRILLIANCE OF C. PILE

(By "Veritas")

C.A.A.F. ..... 1 H.K.F.A. .... 0

C.A.A.F.—Wong Wing; Mak So and Li Tin-sang; Ho Ching-yip, Tsui Ah-fai, and Leung Wing-chui; Tso Kwai-shing, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheung, Chan Chun-wo, and Lee Shek-yu.
 H.K.F.A.—Cocker; A.V. Gosano and C. Pile; Keneghan, McGuire and Parker; T. Pile, B. Gosano, Higgins, Ridley, and Bjerkford.

OVER FIVE THOUSAND wildly excited Chinese watched their favourites win one of the most astonishing and eventful matches in the annals of local football when the Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation met the Hongkong Football Association in the season's second contest for the Governor's Cup at Caroline Hill yesterday.

Incident followed incident, and thrill succeeded thrill with such rapidity that the crowd's vocal demonstrations made practically one continuous roar. Seldom have I seen so much excitement crowded into a short period as in the last fifteen minutes of this match. First Li Tin-sang received marching orders; then A. V. Gosano was sent off; in desperate efforts to score an equaliser the Football Association hit the cross-bar, missed a penalty and allowed three open goals to go begging.

FROM FOOTBALL TO BRAWL

The Chinese, a better team all round, played finely until Li caught Sergt. Isley's eagle and reproving eye. Then they fell right away and what before was football became football. Offences, some technical, others very deliberate and not a little dangerous, were committed every other minute, while the already overheated players became more and more unmanageable under the influence of the partisan crowd. The closing ten minutes were more in the nature of a dog fight than a display of football, but even this could not rob the game of its thrill. The Chinese won not so much because they were a superior team, but because the Association players hadn't a shot between them. Rid, y twice ballooned over the bar from four yards range, and capped a wretched afternoon by making an awful hash of a penalty. It was a thousand pities that the players could not hold their tempers, for the first three-quarters of the game contained lots of splendid and entertaining football. The sending off of Li Tin-sang was, I think, a real surprise to most people. For my part I did not see what happened, except that there was a scuffle in front of goal, in the course of which Li must have seriously fouled somebody.

A GOAL THAT WASN'T A GOAL

Anyways Sergt. Isley's finger firstly pointed inexorably to the pavilion and then to the penalty spot. Less than five minutes later A. V. Gosano, who had come up to over the halfway line to help concentrate the Association attack came into conflict with Fung King-cheung. Again it was difficult to see exactly what happened, but I think Fung fouled Gosano and the Recreio player lashed out. Anyhow he also went off and the teams fought out the closing minutes with ten men each and the Chinese goal bombarded from all angles. To cap everything in this match of many incidents, the Chinese scored the winning goal which was never a goal. The ball was sent hard forward on the right and Tso Kwai-shing, chased it; it was obviously going out and had actually bounced a yard over the line when Tso got his foot to the ball, lofted into the middle for Chan Chun-wo to head into an open goal. So convinced (and rightly too) were the Association defenders that the ball was out of play that Cocker made no attempt to save, although he could have done so with ease. It was a very unsatisfactory goal, but after consulting a linesman, the referee awarded it. Nevertheless, being right down that end of the field I can vouch that the ball was well over the goal (Continued on Page 5.)

Championship Tennis This Afternoon

FINCHER MEETS SHUTE

The continuance of the open tennis championships to-day brings several of the Colony's best players into action. The programme is confined to singles with nine matches scheduled. Most interesting of them all is the first round tilt between E. C. Fincher and E. L. H. Shute.

Fincher is firmly favoured to win, and in fact, expected to go on to the semi-final, but he will have no cake-walk against Shute, who has as much experience of tournament tennis behind him as Fincher.

Shute's performances in club tennis since his arrival in the Colony has emphasised that he is a player who can hold his own in the best of company. He is a hard hitter, and favours top-spin driving. Fincher's heavily cut shots may nullify Shute's ground strokes.

Tennis Kwik should not unduly worry S.A. Rumjahn, although the Chinese is a steady player, and is bound to offer stiffer opposition than Sirdar received in the first round.

PAGH'S TASK

If Pagh can forget that Ho Ka-lau is a high ranking player, an Inter-porter and one of last year's semi-finalists he may give the C.R.C. exponent a good run for his money. Pagh can pull out some very good tennis indeed, and if he can play anything like a normal game the match is bound to provide some keen and interesting exchanges.

Paul Kong, H.D. Rumjahn and Tsui Yau-pui look safe for comfortable passages into the third round. Here is this afternoon's complete programme.

GUY CHENG'S DRIVING

Impresses At C.R.C.

FINE TENNIS

(By "Veritas").

Guy Cheng's powerful driving almost annihilated Tsui Wai-pui when these two tennis stars met in an exhibition match at the Chinese Recreation Club yesterday afternoon, and it was quite sufficient to give China's Davis Cup nominee victory in straight sets, the scores being 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Those spectators who recalled Cheng's last appearance in Hongkong—nearly two and a half years ago—must have been highly impressed with the progress made by this young player.

Cheng had not only changed his grip, but a good deal of his style. Off the ground he has added pace to soundness. His footwork shows a marvellous improvement, although his overhead and volleying is still far from first class.

BEATEN BY SPEED

Yesterday Cheng beat Tsui by sheer speed and when it is realised that Tsui is happier against this type of game, the power of Cheng's drives can be more readily imagined. The Shanghai player gained a beautiful length and perfect control from the start, and while it is true he made a certain number of mistakes it is equally accurate to observe that it was his fine ground strokes which gave him such a decisive win.

One of Cheng's best shots was a running forehand drive in which excellent footwork played an important part. His backhand was as stylish as ever, but much more of an attacking stroke than in 1932. But in addition to power in his driving Cheng made admirable placements which kept Tsui on the move from corner to corner. A deceptive variety in flight and pace were other important contributory factors to these punishing and point-winning shots.

Up at the net Cheng did not show Davis Cup class. He made a hash of two easy "kills," volleyed one ball very weakly into the net and only once scored outright from the forecourt. These were the only real blemishes on an otherwise attractive display.

TSUI'S BIG WEAKNESS

Tsui played well in the first set and then went to pieces. His hitting on the run was about the worst this youngster has shown since getting into the forefront of local tennis. His foot were badly played in taking Cheng's deep drives to the backhand corner and in consequence he could not obtain any lift on the ball.

Tsui hit quite well when he had plenty of time to position himself, and he also pulled out three spectacular passing shots after being driven out outside the court boundaries. But his timing was faulty to the extreme, and his sense of anticipation much below usual standard so that Cheng often caught him on the wrong foot with a shot to his forehand corner.

Tsui played fighting tennis in the first set when he faced a five-love deficit, and did extraordinarily well to pull up to 4-5 before losing the stanza. During this period he brought his drop shot into active and successful use and lured Cheng into errors with heavily chopped half court placements which the visitor continually netted in endeavour to drive.

A TRUCE TO THIS FOOTBRAWL

COLONY SOCCER SUFFERS

LOST SENSE OF PERSPECTIVE

(By "Veritas")

If Saturday's game between South China and the Recreio and yesterday's encounter between the Federation and Association reveal anything it is that local footballers are losing their sense of perspective and proportion. They are sacrificing much that is the best in football either to create, sustain or break a record, or to grab a piece of silver. The ethics of the game are going by the board for material gain.

Tactics displayed at the Railway Ground and Caroline Hill were disgraceful; an insult to a great game which has sportsmanship as its keynote. Legitimate tackling and fair play is in danger of becoming a thing of the past in Hongkong soccer, if teams are allowed to behave as they did in these two matches.

NOT PERSONAL QUARREL

The great thing which has to be instilled into the minds of the delinquents in that football is a game, not a personal quarrel. Neither national, club nor personal honour is at stake in the winning or losing of a game; that is decided by the manner in which the game is played.

Admittedly the Ego cannot be cut out of a football match like an appendix, and to win is to satisfy that ego. But for goodness sake let players, who play by decent, clean and sporting tactics. To allow tempers to flare because the opposition are proving themselves better players is about the worst gesture imaginable. Players seem to lose sight of the ethical ruling that defeat can sometimes be as magnificent as victory.

Displays such as those seen this last week-end are the more pitiful by reason of the fact that all of the players concerned can, if they so desire, play football of the best type. Because of this, any kicking, elbow pushing and flaccid demonstrations are nothing but childish actions, quite unworthy of the performers.

STERNER CONTROL NEEDED

It is obvious that much sterner control is called for if this type of football is going to continue. South China very naturally want to remain unbeaten in the league this year; lots of tennis very naturally desire to have the distinction of being the first to beat them; keenness to win the Governor's Cup is understandable. But to accomplish these ends, teams must play the game properly. If they are not prepared to, then the Football Association have got to take a strong line of action. Marching orders are supposed to act as a severe corrective, but do they? Yesterday's dismissal of two players from the field made but little difference. The Association had three free kicks in the course of the next five minutes.

Questionable tactics may appeal to a section of the crowds which throng to local football matches, but the rules of the game are not founded on mob reactions. The good conduct of players is still an essential quality of football, and to preserve that, the ruling authorities have to take sufficient action, no matter how strict it may appear to be.

line when Two kicked it in, and that actually the ball passed over the cross-bar before dropping on to Chan's head.

THE ESSENTIAL SUPERIORITY

The essential superiority of the Chinese lay in their half backs and forwards. Taul Ah-fai, Ho Chor-ying and Leung Wing-chui constituted a brilliant middle line, while the forwards made fine sweeping movements which to counter extracted the very best from A. V. Gosano and Chris Pile.

Chan Chun-wo, restored to the inside left position as a result of Ip Pak-wa's absence through injury, was the mainstay of a very enterprising attack. Only the masterly defence of Gosano and Pile kept Chan and his colleagues from piling on goals. Keneghan had the measure of Lee Shek-yau, but Parker was far from confident against the Tam-Tao combination and was so often out-positioned that double work was placed on Pile's shoulders.

I say without hesitation that Pile played the game of his life. He did not make a single mistake and some of his interceptions were the last word in perfect timing and anticipation. When Gosano had left Pile held the fort single-handed and never looked like being passed.

Gosano up to the time of his unfortunate dismissal was another outstanding performer, and the Association owed everything to the two backs. They relieved at least a dozen situations pregnant with danger.

McGuire's tackling was good, but his constructive efforts have been much better. Parker was also extremely weak in this phase and did not give Bickford a decent pass right about the match. Keneghan was about the most impressive of a hard-working, but by no means outstanding trio.

ONE BIG MISTAKE

Up forward B. Gosano did a spate of work which yielded nothing. The biggest mistake made was the starving of Bickford, who, whenever he did get the ball made the Chinese defence think more than the rest of the attack put together.

An unaccountable concentration on the right wing was preferred. Fairly well though he played, Tommy Pile was far inferior to Bickford, and it was a grave error to give him so much of the ball.

GERMAN CLUB EXPECTED

TO PLAY LOCAL INTERPORT XI

There is a distinct possibility, if fixtures can be arranged, of the Shanghai German Club hockey team visiting Hongkong at the end of this month to play a series of matches with the Colony Interport side and the services.

Notification of the intending visit was communicated to the Hongkong Hockey Association on Saturday, and a special meeting of the Association is to be called this week to consider the matter.

The Shanghai German Club have been champions of the Shanghai Hockey League for the past two years, and included in their ranks are some of the finest players in the northern port.

MAY MAKE INTERPORT POSSIBLE

If the matches can be arranged the German Club will be the first team from Shanghai to play in Hongkong, and this will undoubtedly do much to help on the inauguration of Interports between Hongkong and Shanghai.

It is also intimated that should the team travel south they will visit Macao.

GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 22, works in a silk mill. She and her brother, PHIL, 18, support their invalid father. Brian takes STEVE MEYER, who also works in the mill, to give him an answer in a few days. Later that evening, Gale goes skating on the river, goes through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car but when he returns she is gone. Brian has come home after two years in Paris, convinced he can never become an artist and ready to go to work in the mill. VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, is Brian's girl friend. Brian sees Gale in the mill and is amazed to find she is an employee. Vicky telephones that her car has broken down. Brian takes her home and on the way they witness a street fight between Phil Henderson and ED VOGEL. The fight ends with a few blows. Brian appears. Later, driving home, Brian thinks of Gale and wonders what her name is.

CHAPTER XII

The line in the cafeteria shuffled forward, past wells of bean and tomato soup, past trays of cabbage and macaroni and cheese and beef stew, on to the small, glittering mounds of red and gold gelatin, the prunes and solid-looking wedges of apple pie.

The heavy porcelain dishes chattered and voices buzzed—now rising and lowering in volume, broken in upon by shrill laughter or a sharp exclamation. It was lunch time for the day shift in the mill.

Gale Henderson, halted by the line in front, rested her tray against the steam table. She nodded and said, "Yes—the tomato soup," to the woman across the counter. Some one joggled Gale's elbow as the woman set the bowl on the tray and the thick red liquid splashed. Gale cursed. She heard the voice of a girl in front:

"Suppose you heard about the fight last night?"

"You mean Vogel and Phil Henderson?" It was a different girl speaking now.

"Yeah. Know what started it?"

"Ruby, I suppose."

"Sure. What all these guys see in that dame—but I guess it was some light Phil ought to know better than to try to cut in on Ed Vogel."

"Say, I thought it was just the other way around!"

The first girl shook her head knowingly. "No, I've got the straight of it," she said. "Blanche Ryan told me and she used to go around with Ruby all the time. Blanche says it's the limit—the way Ruby is always two-timing guys. Just the same, Phil ought to leave Vogel alone. Ed Vogel can lick any guy in the mill."

That's what my brother says. The two girls had reached the end of the line and made their way toward a table. Gale halted, holding her tray. Colour flamed in her cheeks.

She was angry at the girls, angry at Phil. What a way for him to leave the house! No wonder he'd left the house so early that morning. Fighting with a brute like Ed Vogel. Over a girl like Ruby Griffith! That's who they meant, of course.

She wished she didn't have to sit with anyone at lunch to-day. But she did. There were no individual tables in the mill cafeteria. There was Josie Gridley at a table where there was a vacant place. Gale made her way toward it.

Josie said, "Hi, Gale. Sure there's room for you," and pushed some dishes aside. "Well," she went on, "what do you think of the new boss?"

"The new boss?"

Josie nodded. "Brian Westmore," she explained. "The old man's son. They say he's going to work here now—that is, if you can call it work, sitting in a swell office like Thatcher's, giving orders and all that. That was him Thatcher was piloting around yesterday. Didn't you see 'em?"

"Yes," Gale said, "I saw them, but what makes you think Brian Westmore's going to stay here? Maybe he's just home for a visit."

Josie's nod was negative and emphatic. "No," she said, "Bill Keeley knows a fellow in the business office and he said—this fellow, Bill knows, I mean—the young Westmore's got a special office, right next to Thatcher's. Gee, he's swell looking? Don't you think so? Tall and dark and such swell clothes. They say he's been everywhere—all round the world."

"And he paints pictures," the girl across the table put in. "That's what he was doing in Paris. Painting pictures!"

"I'll bet that wasn't all he did," her neighbour added knowingly. "I've seen it in the movies—the way they cut loose in Paris. Champagne and swell parties and girls dressed up in feathers and not a stitch of anything else. I saw a movie just last week where there was a fellow who was an artist."

"What I want to know," Josie interrupted, "is why he came back to this place. Imagine a guy with the money Brian Westmore's got, able to go anywhere he wants to and do anything he pleases. Imagine coming to this place!"

There was a chorus of agreement. "Gee, I know what I'd do," the girl across the table began, but again Josie cut her short.

"Look," she said, pointing to the clock on the wall. "Seven minutes and you've got to be back on the job. Wonder how long Mr. Brian Westmore gets his lunch. D'you suppose they cut his pay if he's a minute late?"

"Well, they'll cut yours," the other girl snapped back. "I wouldn't care how many new bosses we got if only it wasn't so hot and close. Honest, this morning I could hardly breathe!"

"It was bad," Gale agreed. "Worse than usual."

Josie pushed her chair back. "I'll drop in and mention the fact to Thatcher," she said sarcastically. "Or have! No wonder he left the house so early that morning. Fighting with a brute like Ed Vogel. Over a girl like Ruby Griffith! That's who they meant, of course."

She wished she didn't have to sit

ing bell rang. "If only I knew what to do about Phil," she thought again. "If only I knew how to help him!"

She was back at her place, hands ready, a full minute ahead of time. The warm, moist air pressed about her. Now the spindles were dancing again. The machines roared. Sixty women in blue dresses, heads and fingers moving as though they were machines, too, clamped on bobbins, twisted the thread, snapped them off. Human arms and machine fingers; human fingers and machine fingers; up and down, up and down—

That was the afternoon Connie Dauman fainted. Gale didn't see what happened. She didn't know anything about it until she heard Fisher, the foreman, saying something in a loud voice. Gale turned and saw Connie on the floor. Another girl was leaning over her and Fisher was beside them.

"Here, you! he called to Gale. 'Help us get her out of here!'

They had to carry her. Connie's eyes opened when they were in the corridor. She tried to speak but, though her lips moved, no sound came. They took her through a door marked "Emergency," into a little room in which there was a couch.

A crowd of half a dozen had gathered about the door. Someone said, "They ought to keep her head down. They ought to put water on her face."

Another said, "My sister fainted once—"

"Get back to your machines," Fisher ordered. "I'll take care of this."

Gale, turning into the hall, almost walked into a tall young man in a brown suit. It was Brian Westmore.

"What's happened?" he asked. "Was it an accident—is anyone hurt?"

Gale said, "A girl fainted. She's in there—"

She slipped past him then, hurrying down the hall. "Wait a minute!" Brian called. He took a step after her, the girl apparently did not hear. She was out of sight in another instant, disappearing through a door from which came the grinding roar of the machines.

Connie did not come back to work that afternoon. Voices buzzed in the wash room at quitting time. Someone said Connie had been warned by a doctor that her lungs were infected. Another said, no, it wasn't her lungs; it was her heart. There were rumours that she'd been rushed to the hospital, that her brother's wife had come for her, that Connie had recovered completely and walked home.

"I like to faint myself," a girl beside Gale fretted. "Hot as it was to-day? It's bad enough most of the time, but to-day—!"

"Yes," Gale agreed, "it was worse than usual."

"Know what I think's the matter with Connie?" the other went on.

"What?"

"I think she's starving herself, that's what I think. She doesn't buy any lunch, you know. Just brings something. All she had the other day was an apple—I know because I saw her eating it here in the wash room. She said something about not being hungry and having had a big breakfast, but I didn't believe a word of it. Connie lives with her brother and his wife and he ain't been working, you know. Laid off a month ago. I don't think they've got anything but just what Connie makes—"

Gale nodded. She said, "Yes, I think that's what's the matter with Connie. She shouldn't do it. She won't be able to work if she doesn't eat."

The other girl turned away. Gale put on her coat and hat and went down the corridor. Outside she faced Brian Westmore. He was smiling and he said, "I thought if you were going down the street you might let me walk along with you."

CONTRACT
BRIDGESolution to Previous
Contract Problem

By W. E. McKenney

I hope you didn't try to work today's hand out by just taking a pencil and marking the cards off
on the paper. If so, I'm afraid you found the hand more difficult than you expected.Harold Solof of Pittsburgh gave me this hand and said that it was dealt out in a regular rubber game
at home, and after the hand was played he couldn't understand whysix-odd hadn't been made. When he laid the hand out, he found he had a very fine double dummy problem.

The Play

The opening lead was the six of diamonds, which East won with the ace. He returned a club. You might be able to defeat the contract by playing the first two tricks
some other way, but these first two tricks are definitely set. From now on the hand must be made against the best possible defence.The second trick is won in dummy with the king of clubs. At this point take two rounds of hearts, winning the second round in dummy with the king. West discards a diamond and East a spade. Now lead the ace of clubs.
Would you discard a diamond or a small spade? If you do either, you lose your contract.The only way the hand can be made at this point is for South to discard the ten of spades.Now start the heart suit. Cash
the ten, lead the seven, and overtake with the jack. East will discard a diamond and a spade. Now lead a diamond and a club. Now the queen of hearts is played. West discarding the ten of clubs, dummy
the six of spades, East the seven of clubs.Next the six of hearts. West lets go a spade, dummy the seven of diamonds, and East the queen of spades. Now the five of hearts.
West lets go the three of spades
and dummy the eight of diamonds.

Today's Contract Problem

South is playing the contract at six no trump. West opens the five of clubs. What is the safest way to play the hand, and can you accurately
read the cards so as to make the play that will give you
your contract?

S'HAH MARKET REPORT

EXCHANGE WEAKER
AS BANKS BUY

(Special to "Telegraph")

Shanghai, Mar. 11.
The Foreign Exchange Market here opened easier this morning, but immediately turned with sellers of exchange predominating. There is no apparent reason for this action, except that it is possibly a reaction to the recent weakness. The market turned easier at 10.50 a.m.

The easiness is apparently due to reports that the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation is buying exchange, and also that Chinese Banks are buying.

There is, however, practically no business being done on the foreign exchange market.

Trading was practically at a standstill at 12.40. The undertone is easy.—United Press.

GOLD BAR EXCHANGE.

Shanghai, Mar. 11.
The Gold Bar Exchange here will be closed on Tuesday, March 12, in observance of the anniversary of the death of Dr. Sun Yat-sen. Hitherto the Gold Bar Exchange has not been closed on this occasion, and the closure this year is regarded as being indicative that the Central Bank does not want the market to get out of hand.—United Press.

TOO MANY PASSENGERS

STEAMER RETURNS TO WHARF

On the ground, it is alleged, that more passengers were being carried than allowed by her Hongkong licence, the s.s. Tin Yat, Canton-bound, was compelled to put back to her wharf on Thursday night, shortly after starting out on her trip. Over 100 passengers, it is ascertained, were disembarked, before the vessel was permitted to sail.

The unusual action was taken before the Tin Yat had left the harbour. Near Stonecutter, she was stopped and boarded by officers from a Harbour Department launch. For over an hour, a check was made of the number of passengers and, finally, the Tin Yat returned to her wharf where the number allegedly being carried in excess of her limit of 700, were landed.

Due originally to leave at 10 p.m., it was not until shortly before one o'clock the following morning, that the Tin Yat once again started out on her trip.

Returning from Canton, the vessel has now gone into dock for an extensive overhaul.

REDS IN U.S. NAVY
YARDS

SHAKE-UP EXPECTED
AS CONSEQUENCE.

(Special to "Telegraph")

Washington, Mar. 10.
A shake-up in the American Navy Yards is viewed as a possibility as a result of testimony in the House Naval Affairs sub-Committee, which alleged that there were 36 known Communists employed in the Washington Navy Yard.—United Press.

CLAIMS AGAINST AMERICA

GOLD CLAUSE AGAIN
AN ISSUE.

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, March 10.
A joint legal action of investors in the United Kingdom, France, Holland and Switzerland, to obtain the American Supreme Court's reversal of its own Gold Clause decision, is envisaged in a letter accompanying the expert opinion of the Committee's counsel, Mr. Barnett Hollander, which has just been delivered to the London Advisory and Protective Committee for American Investments.

The Counsel's opinion foresees the possibility of the Supreme Court overruling its own judgment if the foreign holders of certain United States Gold bonds can prove before the United States Court that they sustained actual damages.—United Press.
